Advice Is One Thing How to Stop Crime Why Are Prisons? Discovery Is Not All

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

Gandhi, leader of India, advises "passive resistance" and his followers burn, loot and kill, as they shout "Holy Gandhi." It is one thing to start a peasive, peaceful movement, another to KEEP it peaceful. Tolstoy, in Russia, advised non-resistance and set millions of Russians thinking. But when men think, they think THEIR way, not always as prophets advise. The Christian nations that recently butchered each other to the tune of many millions of men, and many hundred millions of dollars, are supposed to be followers of Him who said:

"Ye have heard that it hath been said, an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth:

"But I say unto you, that ye resist not evil; but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also."

But the nation that stood aside from the fighting and smiled and built up industry, was pagan Japan.

How are you going to stop crime? Can you do it by excessively severe punishment, by speedy trial, sentence and—execution, in case of murder? Could you do it by inventing new punishment? Probably not.

One gentleman suggests that men once convicted be branded "convict" on the forearm, indelibly branded so that it never can come off.

It would be an advantage, says the inventor of the idea, because everybody would know any man for a convict as soon as he rolled up his sleeves. Employers could always say, "Roll up your sleeves," before giving a man a job.

The idea seems brilliant, but what about compelling convicts to REMAIN CONVICTS throughout their lives?

Branding is an old idea. In the middle ages in England, strikes and such things were forbidden of course. What is more, it was against the law for a miserable creature lacking work in his own parish to wander off.

Any workman caught wandering in search of a job away from his own parish was branded on the cheek with a red-hot iron. That probably did not do much good; in fact, it undoubtedly hurried on the days of labor unionism.

You can stop crime by changing conditions, as you diminish ignorance by increasing education.

There is truth in the statement of an old woman whose son was recently arrested for murder: "Taking boys into the army and teaching them that it is all right to kill other boys is a bad thing."

That idea as to the advisability of killing can be ground out by education, kindness and especially OPPORTUNITY.

You cannot get rid of it by lashing prisoners, branding them, hanging or electrocuting them with unusual rapidity. Do not follow the criminal's bad example by showing contempt for law when you are frightened. What even justice can't do cannot be done.

Four convicts, two serving life terms for murder, were released from the penitentiary at Jefferson City, Mo., "on their honor" to spend Christmas with their families, and sent off alone, unwatched.

They all came back, and announced that a good time had been had.

Some will say: "That is spoiling convicts with slushy sentimentality. Maybe, but will such treatment make better men or worse men of them? And should prisons make men better or worse? Are they for correction or for revenge?"

The French say that Jean Cousin of Dieppe discovered America in 1488, ahead of Columbus. Possibly, but it doesn't matter. Others discovered America long before, and long before the Christian era. Our red Indians are not of American origin; they come from Asia. Ancient civilizations of Mexico and Peru came across the water, or perhaps on land, since wiped out by the ocean.

A Greek experimented with a little steamboat on the Seraplon, according to historians, long before the birth of Christ. That doesn't take any credit from Fulton. Not merely discovering or

SECURITIES TRACED TO BOSTON BANKS

Benjamin Greenberg Taken in Custody While Negotiating Loan on Bonds

Through the arrest today of Benjamin Greenberg, who told the police he was a son-in-law of Simon Swig, vice-president of the closed Tremont Trust Company, the Boston police declare they will be able to trace the sale of more than $100,000 worth of bonds that were part of the loot of a $350,000 Los Angeles mail robbery that occurred last March.

Bonds stolen in the Los Angeles holdup, to the value of $10,000, have been found in Boston banks and the police are tracing the numbers of several others.

The police declared today that two men of prominence are likely to be drawn into the case in connection with an investigation that is being made of the delivery of stolen bonds to Boston banks as securities for loans.

Greenberg's arrest is the third local echo of the mail robbery. A mail truck was held up in Los Angeles on March 3, 1921, in Los Angeles, by three armed and masked men. Twenty pouches of registered mail were stolen. They contained 800 pieces of mail, with securities later discovered to be valued at $350,000.

Greenberg was arrested in the Boston financial district today by Inspectors Finn, Augusta and Dorsey. They say he was attempting to pledge two

PAPINEAU EXHUMES ACCUSES EMERY

On Witness Stand at Pelletier Trial Says His Veracity "Could Be Better"

Counsel for District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier scored today in Pelletier's trial before the Supreme Court for alleged official misconduct by forcing one State witness to admit that the reputation for veracity of another and important State witness was not all it might be.

Victor D. Papineau was Witness No 1, and he stated, when pressed, that Curtis W. Emery's reputation for truthfulness "might be better."

Both Papineau and Emery were witnesses during the day in the Curtis W. Emery case.

Senator James A. Reed, senior counsel for the defence, was examining Papineau when that witness made the admission regarding Emery.

As Emery is now the husband of Papineau's former wife, and as Papineau had just concluded telling how, he alleges, Emery, aided by her mother and by money, won her away, Papineau's skepticism concerning the frankness of his ex-rival caused some amusement.

IN GOOD FAITH.

Papineau made further admissions tending to lay the groundwork for the claim that in the Curtis Emery case Pelletier acted for what he considered the best interests of the community.

These admissions came when the witness said that charges made against Emery, Mrs. Emery and Mrs. Jennie S. Chase, her mother, were made in good faith, and he had wished them prosecuted.

Emery took the stand after Papineau.

Allen charges that Pelletier, Daniel H. Coakley, William J. Corcoran and Daniel J. Gallagher conspired to extort $50,000 from Mrs. Jennie S. Chase, mother of the present Mrs. Curtis W. Emery.

Mrs. Emery was formerly Papineau's wife, and complaints made by him when she divorced him and married Emery are alleged to have been the basis of the alleged attempt at extortion.

Those charges centre about the paternity of a child born to Elizabeth Chase Emery.

In the course of his examination, incidentally Papineau disclosed that his present address is No. 17 Van-

EXHUME BODY OF NURSE

District Attorney Saltonstall Orders Action After Poison Report

District Attorney Endicott P. Saltonstall today issued orders for the immediate exhuming of the body of Miss Grace Logue, the nurse who was found dead on the morning of Christmas Day in the office of Dr. Michael M. Stevens of Woburn.

District Attorney Saltonstall took this action following a lengthy conference with his first assistant, Charles W. Blood, and Medical Examiner Dr. George B. Magrath, at which the preliminary report of Dr. William F. Rose, the Harvard toxicologist, on the chemical analysis of the stomach and viscera of the dead girl was discussed.

Dr. Rose reported that his investigation had disclosed the presence of a quantity of morphia, but that the quantity tests necessary to determine the quantity of the drug would take at least a week.

CHARGED FOUL PLAY.

In order to avoid delay, Saltonstall decided to have the body of the girl exhumed at once, removed to the North Grove street morgue, where

Boston Four-Master Damaged in Crash off Gay Head

By Associated Press.

Vineyard Haven, Jan. 16.—The four-masted coal-laden Boston schooner Freeman, Norfolk for Boston, came into port today with her bow badly damaged in a collision off Gay Head last night with the steamship Munalbro of the Munson Line, Boston for New York. No one was injured. The steamer was not damaged.

The Freeman, which carried a crew of seven men, reported that she was struck by the Munalbro. The bowsprit of the schooner was broken off. When her commander found she was not leaking, he headed for this port. Word was sent to Boston for a tug to tow the Freeman to that port. The steamship proceeded to New York.

DAYLIGHT THIEVES LOOT REGISTER IN WINTHROP

Thieves broke into the store of the John T. Connor Company, Shirley street, Winthrop Beach, between 1 and 2 o'clock this afternoon and took away the contents of the cash register. The break was made while the clerk was at diner. Before he closed the store he took all the bills and left only the change. When he returned he was surprised to find the cash register empty. Investigation showed that the robbers had forced a rear window.

WILD RUSH FOR SEATS IS MADE

Court Officers Compelled to Intervene to Secure Order at Cambridge

Women fighting among themselves over a seat in the East Cambridge Superior Courtroom, where Clarence W. Loud is on trial on a charge of the murder of Patrolman James A. Preston of Wakefield, today created so much disorder that court officers had to intervene forcibly to restore order.

The battle of experts has greatly increased interest in the trial and the crowd in and about the court house today was much larger than usual. Scores of women were in the throng seeking admission.

Just before the afternoon session a large number of women sought admission. There was but one vacant seat remaining. Several women made a desperate rush for this seat. One woman secured it. The others battled to oust her and secure the seat for themselves.

The women shrieked unkind remarks at each other. Then they all began pushing and crowding about the coveted seat.

So much confusion was caused that

ATTORNEY'S ILLNESS HALTS ARBUCKLE TRIAL

San Francisco, Jan. 16.—Illness on the part of Gavin McNab, veteran chief counsel for Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle, today temporarily halted the second trial of the film star for manslaughter. The task of securing a jury had been resumed when it developed that McNab had been ill all of last night. He was forced during the morning session to relinquish the task of examining prospective talesmen, and the court, learning of his condition, declared a recess.

FORMER NAVAL ENSIGN LYNAM MISSING AGAIN

Joseph H. Lynam, one-time ensign in the United States Navy, also paymaster on the Cruisers Pueblo and Chester, charged by the Navy Department with embezzling $22,000 and spending it on show girls, is missing again. Some of Lynam's friends who stood staunchly by him in the navy-show girl episode, and who thought he had buckled down to business in earnest, said today they were interested no longer in him.

Lynam was in the East Cambridge Jail from April to August last year, when he secured bail. He then got a job with a North End meat packing establishment as a salesman, and was bonded for $1,000 by the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance Company, neither concern being aware that Lynam was the navy officer whose exploits were published far and wide last Spring.

NEW BILL PROVIDES JAIL TERM FOR DRUG PEDDLERS

Not less than one year in jail for "dope" pedlars; at least three months in jail for persons caught with narcotics illegally in their possession, and jail terms for those illegally having hypodermic instruments and for persons allowing "dope fiends" to use narcotics on their premises, are the provisions contained in a bill filed by Representative Samuel H. Wragg of Needham in the Massachusetts House.

The Boston American supports this measure as one method of curbing the fast-growing drug peril.

The punishment that will be inflicted on "dope" pedlars, who spread ruin, destroy minds and bodies and drive their victims to crime, would be not less than one year in the House of Correction and the maximum penalty would be five years.

Every government committee which has probed the drug evil and private investigators, including the Boston American, find that the vast narcotic traffic can be traced to the "dope" pedlars.

They are considered by many to be on the same plane as murderers; they spread slow death and are chiefly responsible for crime. Once the drug user has exhausted his money to obtain "dope," he resorts to law breaking.

His craving for the deadly drug must be appeased, he believes. While the "dope" may be taken for pleasure purposes at first, the confirmed adthe court officers rushed to the scene. They had difficulty in quieting the women and refusing admission to those for whom there were no seats left.

BULLETS ARE IDENTIFIED BY FIREARMS EXPERT

WOMEN TURNED DOWN.

Previously women have been given the preference for positions in the long line which awaits admission to the courtroom.

As a result of today's disorder, court officers ruled that women will have to take whatever place in the line they may be able to obtain by their own efforts.

Many women who sought admission today were unable to enter the court room.

Captain Charles J. Van Amburgh, a firearms expert from Bridgeport, Ct., testified today that three bullets offered as evidence by the State were, in his belief, fired from a .45-calibre, old model Colt revolver.

Loud admitted, at the time of his arrest, his ownership of two Colt revolvers of a similar type.

Captain Amburgh weighed the bullets, measured them and subjected them to microscopic examination. He declared the three bullets had been fired from the same weapon, basing his opinion on similar marks found on each.

Augustus M. Summers, former camping companion of Clarence W. Loud, changed his testimony, as given Saturday, when he was recalled to the stand today.

Under the questioning of Attorney John F. Feeney for the defense, Summers said he could not properly illustrate "flanning" a single-action Colt revolver, which he attempted Saturday with a weapon from which the cartridges had been extracted, unless the guns were loaded.

Medical Examiner Roscoe D. Perley of Melrose was next recalled to the stand. He was questioned closely by Attorney Feeney in regard to the injuries to Loud's head that he observed on the night the defendant was arrested.

Dr. Perley admitted that the injuries could have produced a dazed condition. Loud's assertion has been that he was dazed on the night of April 9 as the result of an attack on him by a holdup man.

With Dr. Perley's reappearance as a witness, the battle of medical and firearms experts was continued with renewed vigor. A number of other experts, both for the State and defence, were in court, listening attentively to the evidence and making notes.

Loud was declared to be awaiting eagerly his chance to take the stand and testify in his own defence. He spent much time on Sunday in conference with his counsel, Attorney John P. Feeney and Judge Malcolm Stanton.

SUMMERS IS RECALLED.

Neither Mrs. Loud nor her son Dock was in court this morning.

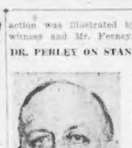
After a consultation with Judge Brown, Mr. Feeney said he wanted to recall Augustus M. Summers. The witness came in and there was read to him his testimony of Saturday about having seen Loud "flanning" a .45-calibre, single-action Colt revolver, and he was asked if he cared to make any change in his testimony. He replied that he did.

Chief Justice JOHN C. CROSBY

Summers said he could not properly illustrate "flanning" unless the gun was loaded and discharged each time. He said that after each explosion there would be a violent recoil and the gun would have to be lowered to an aiming position again before it could be fanned.

Dr. Feeney showed the witness a double-action .45 Colt revolver and it action was illustrated by both the witness and Mr. Feeney.

DR. PERLEY ON STAND.



Chief Examiner ROSCOE D. PERLEY

Medical Examiner Dr. Roscoe D. Perley next took the stand and Mr. Feeney took up his cross-examination. Dr. Perley said that he did not know the body was carried from the house of the Loud's to the first-aid room at the Wakefield police station and did face down in the automobile.

Dr. Perley described the wound on the back of Loud's head, and said he saw no blood on Loud's collar. There were two bruises on the forehead, one over the right eye which ran from the eyebrow to the top of the head, he explained. The bruise was three-quarters of an inch in width and was black and blue. There was a similar bruise to the left of the first one. There were also a number of scratches or abrasions of the skin at the top of the forehead, close to Loud's hair. The skin was broken. This was a horizontal wound, about two inches in length. The other wounds were vertical.

"Could the injuries which you saw have produced a dazed condition?" asked Feeney.

"They might," answered Dr. Perley.

Q.—Can a man have a fracture of the skull with no more external marks than those which you saw. A.—It could be possible.

Q.—Would such wounds produce concussion of the brain? A.—They might.

Feeney wanted to know if a man who had been rendered unconscious could be as mentally alert as before, that is, when he at first recovered his consciousness. The doctor said, "No."

During Dr. Perley's cross-examination, Richard Loud came in and took a seat in front of his father.

Mr. Feeney had Dr. Perley describe in great detail the examination he made of the various wounds on Officer Preston's body. The doctor contrasted upon Mr. Feeney where the various wounds were.

TWO DOCTORS CALLED.

Dr. Ralph H. Stratton and Dr. Melville S. McLeod of Melrose, who were at the autopsy conducted by Dr. Perley, also similar testimony to the medical examiner.

On cross-examination, Dr. McLeod said he saw some auto raffle tickets in Officer Preston's cap at the first aid room of the Wakefield police station. He saw a man named Wilbur Robinson take the cap off the officer's head. The raffle tickets were under the band in the cap.

The doctor said he saw Preston's billy that night and there was no blood on it. The doctor said that he had never seen nor talked with Loud before this case.

Captain Charles J. Van Amburgh of Bridgeport, Ct., assistant in the ballistic department of the Remington Arms Company, an expert on firearms, was next called. He was questioned by Assistant District Attorney Lawrence Saltonstall.

He examined three bullets by the assistant district attorney. He weighed them, measured them, examined them microscopically and said that they were Colt .45-calibre bullets, manufactured by the Winchester Repeating Arms Company.

He was asked how many guns these bullets were fired from. Mr. Feeney objected. The question was allowed and Feeney excepted.

Captain Van Amburgh said the bullets were fired from the same weapon.

Similar marks of a uniform appearance were on each bullet, he said. He found the bullets .45 of an inch in length and was a sort of ridge. The marks, in his opinion, were made during the firing of the revolver.

In his opinion, they were fired from a .45-calibre old model Colt revolver. This opinion was given after a study of the impressions on the bullets.

Recess was taken at this point.

When Captain Van Amburgh resumed the stand at the afternoon session, he was shown Loud's box of cartridges and powder found in the attic of his home the night of the murder. He was then shown a bullet found at the scene of the shooting. He said the bullet was fired at a sharp angle, shown by multiple indentations extending about one-third of the circumference around it. The captain said one bullet did not hit a rock.

Q.—Why? A.—The nature of the gouge on the bullet, with the lead rolled up on one side, would indicate that the velocity of rotation was very high when fired. He intimated that the bullet struck a small bone in some one's body during its flight.

He said four bullets could be fired from a .45-calibre Colt revolver in less than four seconds. He said he had examined the coroner's holes in the clothing of the dead officer. He found the hole in the shoulder of the officer's coat the largest of the holes, and nearer than six inches or further than twelve inches away. He contended the second bullet made the hole showed the gun was held six to twelve inches away.

BODY OF LOGUE GIRL ORDERED EXHUMED

District Attorney Saltonstall Moves in Mystery After Poison Report

Dr. Magrath will at once begin a thorough investigation.

Following the report of the medical examiner at Woburn, Dr. Stewart, in which the cause of the girl's death was found to be morphine poisoning, the Logue family charged foul play, and demanded a more searching investigation.

Dr. Stevens was held. He explained he had administered two doses of morphine during the night in order to allay the pain caused by an internal ailment. The first dose the physician declared had been an eighth of a grain and this was followed later by a quarter of a grain.

It was asserted that the girl had later left the house and taken two tablets of the drug which she found in the doctor's medicine case.

The viscera and stomach of the girl were then sent to Dr. Boos for chemical analysis. District Attorney Saltonstall has been waiting for the expert's report before taking any further step.

The mysterious nurse "Bessie" employed by Dr. Stevens for more than five years, and whose disappearance some time ago led to the fear that she had died as the result of drugs, was found today by the Boston American.

"Bessie" told the Boston American the story of her life as a nurse with Dr. Stevens, how she became a drug addict and how she was finally cured, she claims, through his efforts. Dr. Stevens has been under investigation since Miss Christina Morrison, when the body of Miss Grace Logue was found in a room in his apartment.

NAME IS WITHHELD.

"Bessie's" name and address are withheld for the present at her request, following a big story.

"It was Dr. Stevens who gave me my first dose of morphine. But I want you to understand that he did not give it to me willingly. He gave it to me after I had begged him for it.

"I had been employed at his office for some time, and one day, when I was in terrible pain, I begged and begged him for just one dose to relieve me. The dose was a bit large, I guess, for I was in a serious condition as the result of it, and the doctor had to resort to serious methods to restore me to health.

"Dr. Stevens was terribly set against my taking drugs, and for that matter he objected to drugs for any one. But I liked the feeling the drug produced, and in a short time I was a regular drug fiend.

"I could not get along without drugs. When I was prevented from getting them I was wild, raving. I simply had to have them. I grew worse as time went on, but I could not stop.

"Dr. Stevens begged me to stop again and again. He would not give me the drug, but I got it elsewhere. Finally he declared that I must be cured of the habit and he sent me to a sanitarium. He paid the bills for me. He wanted to cure me.

"When I was not cured at the sanitarium he sent me to another. That did not do the trick and he sent me to a third sanitarium for treatment. He spent hundreds of dollars to cure me, but the sanatariums could not do it.

"At last Dr. Stevens took me back to his home and treated me himself. He worked day and night with me and finally cured me of the terrible drug habit for all time. He did what the sanitariums failed to do. He cured me.

"Thank God, today I do not use narcotics and I know I never shall again. It is a terrible habit. None except a person who has gone through it knows the awfulness of the habit. A drug addict lives in hell all of the time. When one can't get it he or she suffers. When one gets it there is the fear that you will not be able to get more.

CONFIRMS WILD PARTIES.

"The report that I had died struck me as funny. I am far from dead. I have escaped from something worse than death—the drug habit.

"I did not drop out of sight intentionally. When the doctor went into the army I secured other employment and simply did not return to his office when he came back. I was unhappy there and had no desire to return.

"The nurse then spoke of the alleged wild parties that are said to have been indulged in by men and women of Woburn, Malden, Everett and other surrounding cities and towns. She admitted that she had attended many of the parties, but declared that at none of them did she see any drugs.

"There was plenty of liquor at all of the parties," she stated, "and men and women became drunk and the parties grew wild at times, but as for drugs, I did not know of any. Drugs were not needed. The parties were wild enough with the liquor that was supplied in great quantities.

"I hated that sort of thing, and was unhappy when it was going on.

"I will say this, that during my five years in the physician's office I was treated with the greatest kindness and have not a word of complaint. But I am happier now. No more drugs for me. I am cured, and I have Dr. Stevens to thank for it.

"I treated him mean at times, too. But his big heart would not let him hold it against me. I was absolutely vicious at times and was not entirely responsible for all that I did. But it is all over now. No more drugs. No more sorrow."

JUDGE PUTS OFF NAMING NEW TRUSTEES

Postpones Action in Christian Science Case Until End of Present Hearing

Judge Clifford P. Smith, on behalf of the directors of the Christian Science Church today asked Judge Crosby of the Supreme Court to appoint trustees of the Christian Science Publishing Society to fill vacancies now existing, occasioned by the resignations of Hereert W. Bustard and Edwin F. Harvey, which were accepted by Judge Crosby Saturday.

Judge Crosby declined to take action on the appointment of new trustees until after the conclusion of the present hearing of the petition of the trustees, asking that their accounts be approved.

The direct examination of John R. Watts, business manager of the publishing society, was then resumed, correcting a statement made on Thursday last, Mr. Watts said that he had accounting made by the trustees to the directors was in 1919 as of March 20, 1912. Actual payment of monies to the directors was made later.

FINDS ERROR ON BOOKS.

For the year ending April 1, 1919, Mr. Watts said the gross income was $9,335,510.20; total expenditures, $8,-816,510.61; net profits, $518,999.59. The profits of that year were turned over to the directors in two instalments. Of the $518,999.59 paid to the directors the sum of $287,167.11 was paid on May 5, 1919, and it became necessary for the trustees to borrow $200,000 from the First National Bank to meet that payment.

This resulted in an investigation of the financial system, which therefore had been carried on by the trustees, and the Barrow, Wade & Guthrie Company of Chicago was employed.

The firm found an erroneous system of bookkeeping and an overpayment to the directors of "profits," which should have been charged to "expenses."

Mr. Whipple said the report made by the Chicago auditors tended to justify many items in the system of accounting, which the directors had claimed was a wasteful expenditure of money. Whipple characterized the old system as "preposterous," and said it had resulted in the trustees having paid to the directors $150,000 which they were not entitled to receive.

Following the recommendations of the investigators the capital stock was fixed at $618,633.62, and a further audit showed that on March 31, 1919, the assets of the publishing society were $1,870,804.99; income for the year ending March 31, 1919, $3,381,-974.64; expenditures, $2,988,418.56; net profits, $453,556.09.

BINDERY FIGURES GIVEN.

On March 31, 1920, the report for the preceding year showed a loss of $44,967.87.

A book bindery purchased by the publishing society yielded a net profit to the publishing society of $55,390.13, leaving a net profit of $10,422.26.

From March 31 to November 30 there was a loss of $91,238.82 to the publishing society, leaving a profit of $42,913.52 to the bindery, leaving a net loss to both of $48,325.30.

learned his identity, but on his record with them as a salesman and his plea for a chance to redeem himself decided to give him the chance. Then came a hitch. An agent of the bond company is in New York today.

Last April, when Lynam was still wearing the navy uniform, he was a familiar figure about Boston theatres and hotels. An affair with Miss Margaret Lynes, then playing here in "Apple Blossoms," was much talked about. It was said he was engaged to marry her, although he had a wife and children in Newport. The actress denied it was said, believed he was free to marry.

When he disappeared it was thought he had eloped with her, but Miss Lynes soon located in Wheeling, W. Va., by the American. She denied any knowledge of Lynam's recent movements. Found in Montreal, he came to Boston voluntarily to surrender himself for trial. He was placed under $25,000 bail and sent to jail when he could not raise it. Bail was subsequently reduced to $5000 and later to $2500. The latter sum was raised by his friends and he was released August 3.

GOT EARLY EMPLOYMENT

Some time after his release he applied to the North End packers for a job as salesman. His winning personality got him employment at once and he was assigned territory in Southeastern Massachusetts. The bonding company inspector was also impressed by his manner.

Lynam made good immediately. From the first week he put new accounts on the firm's books and got larger orders from old customers. Knowledge of his past was called to the employers' notice. He pleaded youth, inexperience, the fascinations of a pretty woman, and declared that his lesson had not been wasted on him. He was permitted to continue on his route and continued to sell goods.

The first of the year the firm began to collect outstanding accounts and found money owed to the firm had not been turned in. He was confronted with these facts and he went out to get the money. He did not come back.

GLAIM BROKERS SEEK TO EVADE "BLUE SKY" LAW

In a decision made public today the Department of Public Utilities has made a finding under the "Blue Sky" law, regulating the sale of securities, that the brokerage firm of David A. Manville & Co., Inc., is conducting its business as broker in a fraudulent manner and seeking to evade the provisions of the "Blue Sky" law. In accordances with the requirements of the law, the department has turned over the case to Attorney-General J. Weston Allen.

FORD MAY BUY SEABOARD AIR LINE, SAYS REPORT

Durham, N. C., Jan. 16.—Rumors were heard here today, although without tangible foundation, that Henry Ford may negotiate for the purchase of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad, if his offer for the purchase of the Muscle Shoals plant is accepted by the government. It is believed the report emanated from the New York Stock Exchange, due to the rise in Seaboard Air Line securities after months of stagnation and inactivity.

BERLIN ESTABLISHES NEW SUICIDE RECORD

Berlin, Jan. 16.—A new high suicide record was established in Berlin over Sunday, according to police reports today. Seven women and two men killed themselves. All used gas except a girl who hanged herself. The victims ranged in age from a sixteen-year-old high school girl to a ninety-year-old widow.

$1,000 gold 6 per cent., Baltimore & Ohio Railroad bonds for a loan of $14,400.

He was taken to police headquarters and held temporarily as a fugitive from justice. His fingerprints were found in the records when he took the New York police headquarters sent word that Greenberg had been under arrest there.

Greenberg, the police say, once lived on Orchard street, Jamaica Plain, and now lives on Highland avenue, Hull. He is a druggist by profession.

A default warrant in a case in which Greenberg was charged with larceny of $328 some years ago was discovered at headquarters and Greenberg was arrested and booked on that.

Federal authorities, who have been working on the bond robbery for some time in connection with the Boston police, were communicated with. They will seek a Federal warrant against Greenberg.

Greenberg, the police charge, recently gave $5,000 worth of bonds to a Boston national bank as security for a $4,000 loan.

The prisoner, the police believe, had the help of other persons in disposing of a large amount of the bonds. They allege that agents were sent into several New England cities to dispose of the bonds to banks there.

Thirty-four gentlemen have combined to buy the New York Evening Post from Mr. Lamont, and will "run it." Have you ever seen thirty-four ants trying to drag home the same caterpillar. The caterpillar goes in all directions, except toward home. Finally one ant takes charge and goes slowly, perhaps, but surely, does the job. A newspaper needs ONE man to run it, absolutely, two if classified wish to help him. If more than one try to run it, it usually doesn't run.

There are many good men in the new Evening Post crowd, but my total is not some ONE be the real boss.

New York's highest court says that 8 per cent. profit is enough for landlords. Another court had said 10 per cent., which seems too much for the safest possible investment—a piece of the solid earth.

Various things are coming down, but not fast. The cost of living is still 75 per cent. higher than it was in 1914.

Wages will never come down to the old rate, and ought not to. Therefore the cost of living will never come down all the way. The world is arranged, economically, in such a way as to give the worker always just a little more than it costs to live. Some would like to give him a little less; but then there would soon be no workers.

IS FOUND LIFELESS IN HOTEL

London, Jan. 16 (By the Associated Press).—The body of a man found dead in a hotel at Horsham, in Sussex, on Saturday was identified today as that of the Honorable Victor Gibson, son of the late Lord Ashbourne and brother of the present Baron Ashbourne.

His wife was an American girl, Caroline De Billier, daughter of Frederic De Billier of New York, whom he married in 1909.

Considerable mystery surrounded the case over the week-end. Gibson, on arriving at the Hotel Saturday, asked to be allowed to remain in the smoking room, where he was later found dead.

He had previously stated that he was an Irishman and a rebel, known to the Irish press by half a dozen names, and that he had lived with his father at the vice regal lodge in Dublin fourteen years ago. Some broken glass was discovered in the fireplace and a small quantity of liquid had been spilled on the hearthstone.

Earnest Victor Gibson, who was born in 1875 and educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and Trinity College, Cambridge, married in 1905 Mary Wood Salisbury, daughter of Joseph L. R. Wood of New York. She died the same year, and Gibson four years afterward married Miss Do Billier.

He served in the South African war and was an honorary lieutenant in the army and temporary commander in the Royal Volunteer Reserve. He was admitted to the bar in Dublin in 1899.

The late Lord Ashbourne, who died in 1913, was Lord Chancellor of Ireland under Lord Salsbury, first taking the office in 1885 and holding it also under Lord Salisbury's second and third administrations.

NEW TRAINING FOR IRISH WHITE CROSS NURSES

Additional instruction will be given nurses attached to the American Auxiliary, Irish White Cross, in public health methods to enable them to do more effective reconstruction work in Ireland, according to officials of the organization here. A dance and whist party will be given early next month to raise funds for carrying on this work. The next meeting of the organization will be held in the hall of the English High School, Montgomery street, next Wednesday evening.

WOODROW WILSON SAYRE RINGS HISTORIC BELL

COMMONWEALTH NOT PREFERRED CREDITOR

Supreme Court Rules State Is the Same as Closed Banks Depositors

The Commonwealth is not a preferred creditor in the matter if its deposits in the trust companies closed by order of State Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen, according to a decision handed down by the full bench of the Supreme Court today.

The court dismissed three petitions on the part of the Commonwealth to be declared a preferred creditor in the matter of its deposits, amounting to approximately $700,000, in the Prudential, Hanover and Cosmopolitan Trust Companies.

The decision states that the Commonwealth stands in the same relation toward the closed trust companies that any other creditor does. This means that the State treasury will not be reimbursed in full for the $700,000 tied up in the insolvent banks, but will have to accept the same percentage that private depositors do in the final settlement of the banks' affairs by the bank commissioner.

Similar petitions on the part of the city of Cambridge and the town of Framingham to be declared preferred creditors of the Tremont Trust Company were also dismissed.

BABY GRANDSON OPENS WILSON HOUR TODAY

Rings Old State House Bell; John F. Moors Presides at Meeting

Woodrow Wilson Sayre, two-and-a-half-year old grandson of former President Wilson, struck a big bell in the Old State House at noon today and gave the signal for the opening of Wilson Hour.

Miss Jessie Wilson Sayre, daughter of the former President, held Baby Sayre as he grasped an orange ribbon which hung from the tongue of the bell. Then, aided by his mother, the boy sounded the bell twelve times.

Hundreds of friends and admirers of Mr. Wilson were assembled for the picturesque occasion. It marked the beginning of the Massachusetts campaign to raise $85,000 for the $1,000,000 nation-wide fund to establish the Woodrow Wilson Foundation.

"The Foundation was created," said John F. Moors, who presided, "to pass to future generations the torch which President Wilson lighted and which was revealed more clearly than ever before the need of justice and humanity, not only among men but among nations. Meretorious service to democracy, to public welfare, to liberal thought, to peace through justice will be stimulated and rewarded by the income from the fund."

Mr. Moors explained the reason orange ribbons were chosen in the decorations about the bell was that orange was Mr. Wilson's favorite color.

John F. Moors presided and explained the purposes of the Foundation. An opportunity was also given those who attended to subscribe to the fund.

Mayor and Mrs. Andrew J. Peters, Mrs. J. Malcolm Forbes and a large number of other men and women prominent in Greater Boston attended the meeting.

Other meetings were held at the same hour in other Massachusetts cities. Sixty local chairmen are in charge of raising funds in various parts of the State.

Tonight a meeting will be held in Library Hall, Jamaica Plain, in aid of the fund. Nathan Haskell Dole is to preside and John F. Moors and Joseph A. Maynard are to be among the speakers.

TREATMENT OF INSANE VETS DENOUNCED

Lack of Care Committing Many to Permanent Insanity, Harding Is Told

By Associated Press.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Asserting that the more than 3,500 mentally disabled former service men now placed in State institutions were victims of such "gross neglect, indifference and profiteering" as constituted a "black reproach on the honor of the nation," the disabled American veterans of the World War, in a memorial presented today to President Harding, urged immediate action by the government looking to the treatment of all such cases in Federal institutions.

Neglect of these cases in State institutions, the memorial says, is committing to permanent insanity many of the victims who by timely treatment probably could be cured.

Describing the condition of contract cases of this class in the institutions of the State of Ohio as typical of those in practically every State, the memorial asserts the government "farmed out the insane ex-service men of Ohio to State asylums which are notoriously overcrowded, undermanned and inadequately equipped to treat and care for them," while it has not provided one Federal institution for this purpose in the State.

HALF MIGHT BE CURED.

"For example," the memorial says, "in the Longview Asylum of Hamilton County, Ohio, there are 42 gallant soldiers who broke down mentally under the stress of war, although Longview is so overcrowded that 240 of the inmates sleep on the floor like cattle every night."

Of the 250 mentally disabled placed in all the institutions of the State, of whom, it is said, physicians believe half might be cured by treatment, not one, the memorial asserts, is receiving "medical treatment of any kind for their mental diseases, and curable cases are being daily doomed to permanent insanity." None of the institutions, it is asserted, segregate their tubercular patients.

An average profit of $300 on each patient out of the $547.50 annual maintenance fee paid by the government is shown in figures for the nine institutions of the State cited in the memorial as recently having been made public by Dr. H. S. Mac-Aysel, Director of the State Welfare Department. The profits per man ranged from $276.66 for the Athens State Hospital to $320.93 for the institution for feebleminded.

In hundreds of cases, it is asserted, relatives are refusing to commit mentally disabled veterans, who might be restored to useful citizenship, to conditions in the contract asylums, most of which, the memorial says, are "human dead-weights."

COMMISSION URGED.

To make adequate provision for the treatment of all mental cases in Federal institutions, the memorial urges that the President use his influence in securing early action by Congress on the pending measure to appropriate $16,000,000 for this purpose, citing the report of the special Senate committee that 4,375 more beds are urgently needed, beyond what would be provided by existing appropriations.

During the two years or more before Federal facilities can be increased to take care of all cases, the memorial urges that "infinitely more rigid supervision" of contract institutions be provided and that to co-operate in this work independent commissioners of lunacy service shall be appointed in each State.

JOE, LAWRENCE FIRE HORSE, TO BE SPARED

Lawrence, Jan. 16.—By a vote of three to two the City Council commuted the death sentence passed upon "Joe," one of the oldest horses in the fire department, who had been condemned to die as a vicious animal.

The council decided not to turn the horse over temporarily to Mrs. Henry C. Nevins, of Methuen, who, through a representative, agreed to care for Joe in a private stable and to hire a special horseman to look out for the horse.

Joe, who is twenty years old, came to Lawrence eight years ago from the Salem Fire Department, with a bad reputation. He had kicked a number of the Salem firemen, and had broken the leg of one of them.

The council's record is even worse, two firemen sustained fractures of their legs from kicks of the old horse, and he was declared dangerously untrustworthy.

Alderman Peter Carr, who introduced the order for the death of Joe, stuck to his position and voted against any commutation. He was supported by Alderman Thomas Nelson.

Many women were in the crowd that attended the council meeting. Among them was Mrs. Henry Musk, a prominent member and worker for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Mrs. Musk urged the council to have the animal painlessly killed, as the best solution of the problem.

Edwards, at Divorce Hearing, Admits Given a Few Punches

Judge Burns in Superior Court divorce session today concluded evidence in the cross-suits of Ashton F. Edwards and his wife, Sadie L. Edwards, the former charging infidelity, the latter cruel and abusive treatment and failure to provide. Judge Burns took the cases under advisement.

Edwards denied his wife's story of assaults, slaps, punches and hairpullings. He admitted he had drunk considerable liquor, but in that respect could not excel his wife.

Referring to a dinner party at which Mrs. Edwards had said he knocked out three of her teeth, Edwards said they were all drunk. There came a time when, inspired by drink, he criticised the soup. Mrs. Edwards, under a similar inspiration, rushed over to his chair and threw soup into his face.

Asked by counsel for Mrs. Edwards if he had ever blacked her eyes, Edwards replied that he had slapped his wife only twice in five years, and he guessed her eyes were blackened on those occasions.

Arthur C. Whidden, who was named by Edwards, admitted that when Edwards and detectives broke into the room of Mrs. Edwards on Blackwood street, Whidden was sitting on the bed in which Mrs. Edwards lay asleep. He was clad in pajamas and a bathrobe and had gone into the room to administer to Mrs. Edwards med cine which a physician had prescribed for her. While waiting for the time when the medicine was to be given to Mrs. Edwards, Whidden said he fell asleep.

The attorney for Edwards got Whidden to admit that Mrs. Edwards had visited his room at apartments other than those on Blackwood street. She came, according to Whidden, to get dresses which she was to wash and press for him.

SURRENDER OF KIACHOW IS ACCEPTED

Chinese and Japs Reach Formal Understanding at Washington

Washington, Jan. 16 (By the Associated Press).—The text of the agreement reached by the Chinese and Japanese delegates on Saturday concerning the surrender by Japan of the Kiachow leasehold to China, was formally accepted by the two delegations today when the Shantung conversations were resumed.

The question of all mines along the railroad and in Kiachow was touched upon in today's meeting, but the discussion was not finished and will be continued at a session tomorrow.

Still awaiting the receipt by the Japanese delegation of its instructions from Tokio, which are expected to permit completion of the naval limitation treaty, the arms conference today prepared to turn again to the study of far Eastern and Pacific questions.

The delegations of the nine powers participating in the discussions of those questions were called to meet at 3:30 o'clock in the first session to be held by that portion of the conference since January 5. Prior to the meeting heads of delegations of the five naval powers held another session, and the American delegation also met.

The meeting of the Far Eastern Committee was called, according to the understanding at the Chinese delegation headquarters, for the purpose of discussion on the final draft of the Chinese tariff agreement. The question of the twenty-one demands, the opinion of the Chinese, will not come up at today's session, nor was it believed other Far Eastern questions would be considered at this time

MAN KILLED IN EXPLOSION NEAR PORTSMOUTH

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 16.—One man was killed and chemicals worth thousands of dollars were destroyed early today in an explosion in Building No. 2 of the Atlantic Dyestuffs Company plant in Newington.

Fire broke out after the explosion, and the building, a three-story brick structure, was destroyed.

Seventeen of the plant and of this city were prevented from doing effective work on arrival because certain minor explosions made work at close quarters extremely dangerous.

Frank Frazier, the only employe in the building was found in the ruins, evidently having survived the explosion and been killed when he jumped from the third floor after fire broke out.

STATE LAW VOID IF IT CONFLICTS WITH TREATY

Washington, Jan. 16.—A treaty with a foreign nation supersedes a State statute relating to the holding of real estate, the Supreme Court today in effect held in refusing to consider an appeal which H. S. Herrick sought to bring from the Supreme Court of California against A. Iasletta, an Italian. The State courts held that the California law, prohibiting an Italian from holding property in the State, was invalid because in conflict with the treaty of 1871 with Italy.

Newton Prize Beauty Has Bushel of Proposals

MISS EDITH HARRINGTON

Miss Harrington, a Newton girl, who has been awarded many beauty prizes, declares that even though the ratio in Massachusetts is two women to each man she has received enough proposals by mail to fill a bushel basket.

"Who Said It's a Manless World, When Every Mail Brings 'Em?" Asks Miss Harrington

By HAZEL CANNING.

Perhaps there are two or three women to every man in Massachusetts.

Perhaps, as the result of this, it's a manless world for divers damsels all forlorn.

Maybe—yes. However, tell this to Miss Edith Harrington, of No. 212 Tremont street, Newton, and she'll open her eyes with incredulity.

She'll raise her beautiful hands in disbelief. Then she'll point to a bushel basket of mementos she keeps beside the laundry bag in her closet. With the explanation—

BASKET OF PROPOSALS.

"Proposals, m'dear. A whole basket full of them. Who said that I was a manless world, when every mail brings 'em in to me?"

Here's the story:

Miss Harrington is the winner in five beauty contests. The latest was the Pretty Motorist test in the Boston American, in which she took the prize for being the most winsome young woman automobile driver in these parts. As the result, her mails have been flooded with billet doux from willing swains and lonely swains all eager to have that handsome somebody. Who wanted Miss Harrington to do the assuaging, moreover, which she will not do—never. As she explains:

"You wouldn't believe there were so many poor, silly men in the world till their letters came rolling in. There are letters from all over Massachusetts, from Washington and New York. And to read the letters is to wonder at the splendid gaining propensities of the unexplained animal man. They just see a picture in the paper that they say they like—and then they write they are willing to plunge.

Miss Harrington is disdainful. For she looks all about the world, not rejecting her view.

"There's a thing or two in the world besides a proposing man," says she. "And I'm so interested in a number of things that I can feel like a queen, even disregarding the proposals."

CLOTHES CAME FIRST.

Ask the little lady what are the number of things, and she'll tell you one, first off, new.

"Clothes," she will tell you. "I'm interested, always, in fascinating, moodful, varying, exotic clothes. So interested that I've formulated a little philosophy of apparel. First of all the gown that a woman looks best in, of all others, is the evening gown.

"Sports clothes—let them go. House gowns, forget them, if you can. Even the negligee with its memories of romance, his boudoir piquancies, perhaps its poignances of utter coquetry, should be sacrificed.

"But every woman should find for herself, at least one, utterly bewitching, evening gown. I'd rather go without a collar, than one nice decollete.

"And this is the reason why. The great gods of womankind made woman for the drawing-room. That should be her province, even in an athletic age. And in her drawing-room she should wear something to mark her as queen. This is the gown of the soft revealments. At any rate, that's my idea!"

WON MANY PRIZES.

So speaks the little lady from Newton. Who certainly is qualified to speak. For she has interpreted styles for the World's Wardrobe for two years now. For when it comes to beauty contests, Miss Harrington has won prizes in several beside the Pretty Motorist.

In the "Miss Back Bay" contest she was chosen this must Lillian Russell selected her as the most beautiful girl in a movie contest; in the Boston American Bathing contest she won first prize, and, just lately, in the Advertiser Beauty contest, she took first prize again.

At which time the proposals came in thickets of ever. But, as ever, the young lady just smiled and put them aside.

DENTIST HELD FOR ATTEMPTED LARCENY

Springfield, Jan. 16.—Dr. Augustine J. Moran, a dentist of No. 318 Main street, was one of three men who appeared in court today on charges of attempted larceny. The men were arrested Saturday night after a revolver fight with five policemen at the home of Walter L. Mulligan, No. 67 Avon place.

The police believe that in the arrests they have captured the men responsible for breaks in which private stocks of liquor were taken.

The men appearing in court today with Dr. Moran were Frederick Moran, No. 854 Main street and James Tourmoetis of New Bridge street, West Springfield. They were all held for trial January 26.

QUELL MADRAS RIOT ON PRINCE OF WALES' VISIT

Madras, India, Jan. 16 (By the Associated Press).—Madras had recovered today from the rioting which attended the arrival here on Friday of the Prince of Wales. No further trouble is apprehended. 20 GIRLS FLEE FIRE IN SOUTH END LAUNDRY

ARBUCKLE IS TO PRESENT NEW WITNESSES

By International News Service.

San Francisco, Jan. 16.—The second trial of Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle for manslaughter swung into its second week today, with a jury still incomplete.

Attorneys for both sides entered court today determined if possible to complete the jury before adjournment.

Although both sides have kept their plans carefully guarded in order that the element of surprise may be retained, it was learned today that the second trial will not be entirely featureless. Witnesses are being groomed by the defence who have not hitherto appeared in the case. It could not be confirmed today but the report was current that Betty Campbell, show girl, now in Chicago and a guest at the Arbuckle party, would appear as a witness in this trial and give testimony tending to substantiate the story told by the defendant of the happenings at the gay party, after which Virginia Rappe died.

It was also learned that the State plans a savage attack on the credibility of certain defence witnesses. Detectives assigned to the district attorney's office have been busy for weeks checking up statements made at the first trial by defence witnesses and while District Attorney Brady refuses to disclose information in his possession, he smilingly promises some surprises.

The defence has made elaborate preparations to discredit the testimony of S. O. Hencrichs, "Sherlock Holmes" of the State, who testified at the first trial that he had found an impression of Arbuckle's hand superimposed over that of Virginia Rappe on a door leading from room 1219 in which the State contends that the girl received injuries causing her death. At least two noted finger print experts will testify for the defence, and they plan to present to the jury a demonstration of finger print evidence which will entirely discredit the Heinrichs hypothesis.

KATHRYN MURPHY BRIDE OF J. V. CLEARY

Friends of Miss Kathryn Murphy, twenty-two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy of Richard street, Dedham, were surprised today to learn of her marriage last Wednesday to Joseph V. Cleary, a prominent member of the American Legion and son of Edward F. Cleary, fireman of Dedham's fire department. They were informed in St. Cecelia's Church, Black Bay. Mrs. Cleary was well-known in Dedham having appeared as a member of public dances as dancing partner of Robert S. Wilson.

PAPINEAU, AT THE PELLETIER TRIAL, TELLS HIS FAMILY TROUBLES

CROSS-EXAMINED BY SENATOR REED ON EMERY CASE

couver street, Back Bay. He disclosed it with much reluctance.

He was being examined as to certain letters between himself and Daniel H. Coakley and himself and former Attorney-General H. C. Attwill when he found it necessary to give his address.

Senator Reed laid the foundation for an attack upon Papineau's credibility by confronting him with letters after he had testified in certain important particulars.

Senator Reed offered four letters from Papineau to Coakley and only one reply by Coakley and said he couldn't find the others. He asked Papineau to look for the replies.

Q.—Coakley replied to all your letters? A.—I don't know about them all. He answered some of them.

Q.—You knew Bessie Chase (now Mrs. Emery) in Webster? A.—Yes.

Q.—You knew her in schooldays? A.—Yes.

Emery, which was settled for $1,000.

Q.—Did you also tell him Mrs. Chase was trying to separate you and your wife? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where did you go? A.—To Nantucket.

Q.—When did you return? A.—In September.

Q.—And this Emery who was on the witness stand is now the husband of your wife? A.—Yes.

WENT TO MAINE.

Q.—Had you had any trouble with your wife before you went to Maine? A.—We had arguments, nothing more.

Q.—Did your mother-in-law interfere in your family affairs? A.—Yes.

Q.—As a result of that interference were your family relations disconcerted? A.—Yes.

Q.—You had a son born? A.—Yes, Oct. 22, 1906.

Q.—And your wife lived together until 1911? A.—Yes.

Q.—In between 1906 and 1911 there were no family relations, although you lived in the same house? A.—There were no relations.

Q.—Was this because of what your mother-in-law said? A.—Yes.

Q.—When your baby came did Mrs. Chase say that was going to be the last? A.—Yes.

CLEARY WOMAN.

Q.—What was your first trouble with your wife in Maine? A.—We had arguments in Windsor on various subjects and when I was in Maine I was served with divorce papers.

Q.—Had you heard anything about your wife and Emery? A.—I heard they were together a good deal.

Q.—In your wife's divorce proceeding was there a lady named Cleary mentioned as co-respondent? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was this Cleary woman up in Maine with you? A.—No.

Senator Reed introduced the divorce papers, showing it was brought August 17, 1911, in Worcester.

Q.—You named a co-respondent in your cross-bill for divorce? A.—Yes. Bessie W. Emery.

Senator Reed read bill for divorce, filed by Papineau, against his wife, naming Emery. The paper said that Papineau had introduced Emery to his wife in November, 1910, and that during the Spring of 1911 Emery called on her frequently; took her to places of amusement; visited with her in secluded places and committed many improper acts.

HUGGING AND KISSING.

Papineau said he found them embracing and hugging each other and on one occasion they took a trip to New York and New Jersey together, Papineau, in the paper, said that at another time his wife said, "I do love Curtis and he loves me, and I have not had any relations with my husband for five years, and I will run away with Curtis."

Papineau said Emery's reply to this was, "I love Bessie and we want to get married." The co-husband further said he once found his wife and Emery together hugging and kissing.

Q.—After the case was in this condition, in which you were each asking for a divorce on statutory grounds, you mutually agreed this case would be dismissed and another suit filed? A.—My attorney agreed to it, but I did not.

Q.—Did you have trouble with your lawyer? A.—Yes.

Q.—Were you badly used by him? A.—Very badly.

Q.—And one of the bad things was this agreement to which I refer? A.—Yes.

Senator Reed offered a letter which he said would contradict the statement of the witness on this point.

DOWLING LETTERS.

The letter was addressed to Attorney George G. Dowling and dated January 23, 1912. In it Papineau said he had no money with which to continue his fight and had decided to withdraw with the understanding that his wife would bring another suit for divorce without using the statutory charge.

Q.—You still say you did not give your consent? A.—In that letter I did, but later I changed my mind.

Senator Reed read a letter of the reply of Dowling, dated January 25, 1912. Dowling said the proposition Papineau suggested was the one he had been working for. Dowling mentioned three courses Papineau might follow. The last of them was that Dowling should see Haggerty, counsel for Mrs. Papineau, and arrange for a new bill.

Senator Reed read a third letter, dated January 29, 1912, in which Papineau agreed to the third course of action.

Q.—Do you know when the original bill was dismissed and a new one filed? A.—No.

Q.—How long after the divorce was granted did you learn about it? A.—I read it in the newspapers within a day or two.

DOUBTS LEGALITY.

Q.—When did you first learn that your wife had married Emery? A.—After I visited Coakley the first time. I heard it as a fact.

Q.—You had heard about it before? A.—Yes.

A.—You heard the marriages 'took place in Connecticut'? A.—Yes. I read it in the papers.

Q.—But you told the court in your divorce petition that you did not hear of the marriage until your first visit to Coakley? A.—I did not know it was a legal marriage.

Q.—You knew that your former wife and Emery were married twice? A.—Yes.

Q.—Your answer to the court last week was that you did not know your wife had remarried when you went to see Coakley? A.—I did not think the marriages were legal.

Q.—You didn't dispute the legality of the divorce in Maine, did you? A.—Yes. And I still do.

LIVED WITH FATHER.

Q.—Didn't you also tell Coakley that Emery and your former wife went to live with Emery's father shortly after their first marriage in Connecticut? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then you had learned these facts about your wife before you went to see Coakley? A.—Yes.

Q.—Had you learned these facts as early as June, 1911? A.—Yes.

Senator Reed offered a letter which Papineau wrote to Attorney George G. Dowling of Dedham concerning the divorce case. Papineau informed Dowling that he had learned definitely that his former wife was soon to be a mother, at the Emery home in Medford. He called attention to the fact that her condition dated to a time before the decree became absolute and suggested that this could be used to have the decree granted to her on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment annulled. He wanted the divorce awarded to him. He stated in the letter that Mrs. Chase, his mother-in-law, had been quoted as telling friends that if Papineau wanted custody of the child he might have it. Papineau asked Dowling to find out whether Emery and Elizabeth Chase were married, and concluded, "They gave me a rotten deal. Go to it." It had been sent to Webster in care of the father of Papineau, Dr. L. J. Papineau.

BROUGHT SUIT.

Q.—This letter was written by you to Dowling two years before you talked to Coakley? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you write to Coakley on October 3 that you had learned that Mr. and Mrs. Emery had gone to live with his father after they had first been married in Connecticut and later remarried in Maine? A.—Yes.

Senator Reed offered the divorce decree showing that on November 13, 1912, a decree nisi was granted to Mrs. Emery on charges of cruel and abusive treatment and that it became absolute May 15, 1913. Witness admitted that on June 23 he wrote to Attorney Dowling about the case and that he told Coakley about all these matters.

BROUGHT IN LIST.

Q.—Against whom was the last suit? A.—Mrs. Chase and Emery.

Q.—Do you remember how much they were for? A.—$30,000 against Mrs. Chase and $10,000 against Emery.

Q.—So you went to Coakley and told him there were suits pending? A.—I think so. I am not sure.

Q.—If that was true you gave him to understand there was money to be recovered. That is why you gave him a list of Mrs. Chase's property? A.—I don't know.

Q.—You won't pretend to tell the court that you brought in the list of that property for any other reason? A.—Yes, I brought it at Coakley's request.

Q.—Was there also talk of criminal action between you and Coakley? A.—Yes.

Q.—What lawyer did you tell Coakley had double crossed you? A.—Dowling.

LETTER TO COAKLEY.

Q.—You suggested to Coakley that he bring criminal proceedings? A.—I told him I wanted them brought. But not that he bring them.

Senator Reed read a letter dated October 7, 1916, the day following Papineau's first conversation with Coakley. It was from Papineau to Coakley, and read as follows:

"Dear sir—Enclosed find those three releases I spoke of. If they are of no use kindly return them. Would the fact that Emery and my former wife were twice married, once in Connecticut and once in Maine, have any bearing on the question? On thinking over Mrs. Chase's investments I find they are about as follows: Bank securities, $60,000; transfers from land, $37,500; land sold for speculation, $10,000; Bates building transfer, $7,000; School street property, $10,000; land for railroad, $15,000; sale of the Frederick William Home, $3,000; home in Webster, $15,000; money from the George Tracy estate, $15,000; money from the Mrs. George Tracy estate, $10,000; Brookline home, (don't know the value). This shows she has property in excess of $200,000. I called Hawson on the telephone last evening and everything is all right. He said you were the brightest attorney in New England."

TEN DAYS PREVIOUS.

Q.—To fix the date when you brought suit to get custody of the child which was born seven and one-half month after your decree nisi, I show you a copy of the Boston American for December 16, 1913. The suit was brought on that date.

Q.—And that was only ten days before you went to see Coakley? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the name of this child? A.—Frederick.

Q.—And your child's? A.—His name was George.

Q.—You had told Coakley your former wife and Emery had been living in Middlesex together? A.—That was my information.

Q.—You say you testified before the Middlesex Grand Jury on that occasion? A.—Yes. Three questions were asked me.

WANTED INDICTMENT

Q.—This indictment was on Jan. 19? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you wanted that indictment? A.—Yes. I asked for it.

Q.—And you acted in good faith because you believed a crime had been committed in that county by Emery and your former wife? A.—Yes.

Q.—How soon after you gave your testimony did you learn you were being followed by detectives? A.—November 29, 1915.

Q.—That is the day Patron conferred with you and admitted he was trying to get you into trouble? (Patron is a private detective.) A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he engage you to work for him? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where was the headquarters? A.—He had desk room at No. 311 Main street, Worcester.

INTRODUCED WOMAN.

Q.—Did he discuss the details of the business? A.—Yes. He was to give me $75 a week, and I was to act as field manager.

Q.—Were you to have any lady assistant? A.—He said he would hire lady solicitors to sell stationery and they would be under me.

Q.—Did you tell Patron that before you would accept the position you wanted to talk with your employers and tell them of the evidence pending against you the parties in which might make trouble for you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Patron ask who your attorney was? A.—Yes. I told him Dan Coakley. First he said he didn't know Coakley, then he admitted he did, and said he had done a favor for him that he would never forget.

Q.—Did he try to get any woman for you? A.—He introduced me to a Mrs. Thayer.

Q.—Did he try to get you and some woman together? A.—He did.

Q.—Did you meet any of the women? A.—Only Mrs. Thayer. First at her home and later at the office.

CONFESSED "FRAMEUP."

Q.—Did you and he go out with any woman? A.—I do not think Mrs. Thayer to the Palace Bowling Alley.

Q.—Didn't he try to get you with girls? A.—Yes, he tried, but he never did.

Q.—Did he try to have you take a woman to another State? A.—Yes. He suggested it would be good to take Mrs. Thayer to Portland and for me to act as field manager there. But I didn't.

Q.—Did he confess he had been engaged by the Emerys to job you? A.—He used the word "frame."

Q.—Did he say that was the plan of the Emerys? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then he admitted to you that the plan was to get you into trouble? A.—Yes.

Q.—You saw Coakley, didn't you, and later he told you he would see the district attorney? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he take you to see Pelletier? A.—Yes.

Q.—After you had written this letter to Attorney-General Attwill? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then you had an interview with Attwill later? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell him the whole story of your troubles? A.—Most of it.

Q.—Did you tell Attwill at that conference, in substance, when he asked you, "Well, what did you have to do with the district attorney of Suffolk?" that you had "very little" to do with the Suffolk district attorney and had only met him once, and that a day or two before the indictment? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Didn't you say to him, in effect, "Coakley said he was friendly with Pelletier and that they spoke pleasantly?" A.—I don't recall.

SAW IT IN PAPERS.

Q.—Did you say to Attwill, "Well, after I had made a statement Pelletier said 'All right, let the case go to the Grand Jury'?" A.—I never made that statement. I'll swear to that.

Witness was asked concerning his conference with Pelletier. He stated he did not enter Pelletier's office but was introduced to him by Coakley in a corridor.

He said Pelletier said to him, "Your name sounds good."

Q.—And didn't you further say Coakley said, "I may want to use you soon, Joe." And Pelletier replied, "All right. I'll be glad to do anything for you"? A.—I said that.

Q.—Did you tell Attwill that you told Coakley when you employed him that you were going to get money out of the Emerys and Chases? A.—No.

Q.—Did you tell Attwill Coakley claimed to have control over Pelletier? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell him Coakley claimed to have control over District Attorney Corcoran in Middlesex?

GETTING "DOPE."

Q.—Did you tell Attwill Coakley claimed he was getting "dope" from Gallagher in return for which he was going to have Gallagher appointed assistant district attorney in Suffolk? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell Attwill that in return for what Gallagher had done in giving Coakley "dope" that the latter had arranged to have Gallagher succeed Thomas D. Lavelle as assistant district attorney when the latter resigned? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell Attwill that Coakley said Walsh and Gallagher were ready to talk settlement? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell Attwill Coakley said Pelletier wanted to have the Emerys before him? A.—I believe I did.

Q.—Did you say that Coakley said Pelletier told him the Emerys had admitted their guilt, but that the crime did not happen in Boston? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you say Pelletier had Emery before him? A.—That was the way I understood it from Coakley.

Q.—Why did you go to the Attorney-General to make such a recital? A.—Because I wanted satisfaction. I wanted to know why the indictments had not been tried.

ANXIOUS TO CLEAN UP.

Q.—You say you didn't know what transition had been made in Middlesex? A.—not until Attwill told me.

Witness was shown a letter in which is enclosed a clipping from a Worcester paper dated March 8, 1917, announcing the sale of land owned by Emery's father. He also identified a letter written by him to Coakley March 18, 1917, in which he said: "I am anxious to clean up all my court matters before Spring, as I wish to start something in Worcester."

Q.—Final judgment had been rendered and you knew that it had, before you went to see Coakley, and yet you didn't tell him? A.—I don't remember.

Senator Reed introduced a certificate showing that judgment was ordered on June 7, 1916, in accordance with agreements by which judgment would be entered for the defendant with costs.

Reed read a letter dated May 23, 1917, from Papineau to Coakley, which said:

"Your promise of having my cases disposed of is insufficient and unless some action is taken before the end of the present court session I shall take steps, plans for which I have already made, unless you let me hear from you before June 15."

Q.—Did that mean you were to take the case out of Coakley's hands? A.—Yes.

TAKE CASE AWAY.

Q.—Did you have any plans? A.—Yes. With my brother.

Reed read a letter from former Attorney-General Attwill to Papineau, dated June 27, 1917, saying that the indictments in Suffolk County against Walsh and others were still pending and that those in Middlesex had been filed. He also read a letter dated August 16, 1917, from Papineau to Coakley, saying: "Will you kindly inform me why the indictments in Middlesex have been filed? I am home on a vacation and would like to meet you."

Q.—Did you see Coakley after that? A.—I do not think I did.

Q.—When was your last letter from Coakley? A.—Late in 1918 or early in 1917.

Q.—With the exception of the letter you wrote last year, your letter of October 18, 1917, was the last you wrote to Coakley? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you complete your arrangements to take the case out of Coakley's hands? A.—No.

Senator Reed read the letter dated October 18, 1917, from Papineau to Coakley.

It read, "Some time ago I wrote to you asking for my papers. Kindly mail them. The receipt from Attorney G. G. Dowling I am particularly anxious for."

Q.—In that letter you were discharging Coakley, weren't you? A.—Yes. But I did not receive my papers.

"FINANCIAL BENEFIT."

Q.—Did you see Coakley after that? A.—No. I telephoned several times.

Q.—When was that? A.—Last Spring.

Senator Reed read a letter dated March 10, 1921, from Papineau to Coakley saying, "There is a matter which will work to the financial benefit of both of us which I would like to talk over with you. If you will set the time and place, either in New York or Boston, I shall be very glad to see you."

The reply to this letter, from Coakley, was dated March 12. It read, "Hadn't you better write me of the matter and on some of my trips to New York I might get in touch with you."

Q.—Both of these letters were friendly? A.—Yes. For a purpose.

Q.—What was that purpose? A.—To get an interview with Coakley.

Q.—Why did you say to Coakley a "matter of financial interest to both of us"? A.—I thought if I said that Coakley might let me come and talk to him. (Laughter in the courtroom.)

Q.—Did you ever go to his office between those dates? A.—Not that I remember.

Q.—Do you mean to tell the court you were unable to get into Coakley's office when you now say you never tried? A.—I could never get there by appointment, although I telephoned several times.

SAW HURWITZ.

Q.—Who first talked with you concerning giving information in this case relative to your trouble with Coakley? A.—Mr. Hurwitz of the attorney-general's office.

Q.—How did you see him? A.—At the State House, two months ago.

Q.—Did other others come to see you about it before you talked with him? A.—Yes, I had talked with some others, but I don't remember who.

Q.—You had been going around with the attorney-general, hadn't you? A.—No.

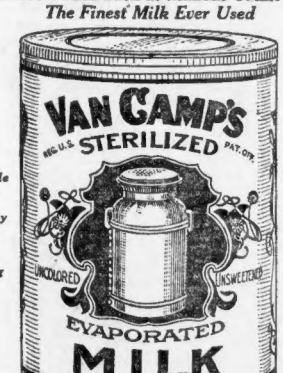
The Finest Milk Ever Used



Milk of Double Richness

Evaporated by Low Heat

Sterilized After Sealing

From Healthy High-Bred Cows Regularly Inspected Model Sanitary Dairies

"The Cow in the Pantry"

The homes of this city can now get Van Camp's Milk—the best milk produced in America.

We cannot supply—and never can—more than one home in a hundred. So we offer it here in our home state. The grocers of this city will be kept supplied. We have many model condenseries, all in famous dairying districts. Each day we milk many thousand cows. But milk of this grade, from high-bred cows, will always be somewhat limited.

A 20-Year Development

About 20 years ago we started out to produce the utmost in rich, safe, cleanly milk. Some of the ablest experts in this line—foreign and American—have been employed to help us. Van Camp's Milk comes from healthy cows of the finest breeds. It has taken years to accumulate them. Those cows are kept in sanitary dairies. Regularly inspected.

The cows are milked close to our condenseries. The fresh, warm milk is then placed in a vacuum. There, by low heat, more than half the water is evaporated.

The milk is then a double-rich milk, as thick as thick cream. It is more than twice as rich as bottled milk, both in butter fat and solids.

Van Camp's Milk

The Best Milk Produced in America

Sterilized and Safe

After this milk is hermetically sealed it is sterilized by heat. Thus it comes to you a germ-free milk, safe for drinking, safe for infants.

The dangers which lurk in ordinary milk are absent in Van Camp's.

If you want very thick cream, Van Camp's will serve as cream. For coffee, cereals and ice cream it can even be diluted. To reduce to rich milk add an equal part of water. Just replace what we take out.

For cooking reduce still further. For every purpose you get full-cream milk when you use Van Camp's.

No Shortage—No Waste

This ideal milk, rich, clean, safe, costs you less than bottled milk. In addition it saves all waste. You don't need to guess at your daily wants. You never have too much milk or too little.

Small cans and large cans are kept ever on the shelf. Open what you need.

Thus you have milk for any purpose in any quantity. Never more than you need, never less than you need. That reduces milk cost to the minimum.

Compare Van Camp's with the milk you use—with bottled milk or with other evaporated. See what we have accomplished. Tell your grocer—now, before you forget—to send a few cans of Van Camp's.

BOSTON TO HEAR BORAH AGAINST 4-POWER PACT

Senator to Address Faneuil Hall Mass Meeting on January 30

Senator William E. Borah will be the chief speaker at a mass meeting in Faneuil Hall on the evening of January 30, as a protest against the Four-Power Pact signed by the American delegates to the Limitation of Armament Conference at Washington.

Announcement to that effect was made today by Matthew Cummings, former Sinking Fund Commissioner, and one of the leaders in the fight here against the League of Nations agreement.

The meeting was to have been held next Monday night, but the Senate action on the allied debt funding bill necessitated the presence of Senator Borah in Washington and the local affair was held off for a week.

The Senator is touring the country in his first fight against the proposed agreement.

"We are against the compact," declared Mr. Cummings today, "first, because it is a distinct stultification of the vote of more than 7,000,000 majority at the last Presidential election, repudiating the League of Nations.

"In spite of that vote, Article Two of the present pact is virtually the same as the infamous Article Ten of the League agreement.

"The conference would scrap our American navy, destroy $200,000,000 of our ships and make England mistress of the seas for another ten years.

"Worse than that, the agreement binds this country to protect England office for fourteen years.

and Japan in their possessions in the Pacific. There will be a meeting at the Hotel Westminster this evening to consider the details for the big meeting two weeks hence."

He pleaded not guilty and in default of $10,000 bail was remanded to jail to await his trial January 28.

Croker Denies Rumor of Going Under Surgeon's Knife

By DENIS O'CONNELL.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Dublin, Jan. 16.—The rumor which spread rapidly that "Boss" Croker was operated on Saturday was absolutely without foundation. Mr. Croker, however, is being attended by two specialists.

I had an interview with the "Boss" and I found him much improved. In answer to my questions he said:

"I know that I possess wonderful vitality, but an operation is entirely out of the question for a man of my age. I am over eighty, you know.

"You may say that I am suffering no pain and the rumors that I am dying are unfounded. I am not likely to die for some time yet."

DR. LORD CALLS FOR WAR UPON PNEUMONIA

Insists on Application of Knowledge to Cut Down Ravages of Disease

"Prevention of pneumonia is a difficult matter," Dr. Frederick T. Lord declared in a lecture in the Harvard Medical School popular courses. "The application of such knowledge as already exists should serve to diminish the disease which, in some form, is responsible for about 10 per cent. of the deaths in the United States.

"We don't know the causes of ordinary colds, or of whooping cough, or even of influenza. The public must inform itself in the investigation work which will help solve this part of the problem. Pneumonia is one of the most promising of medical questions.

"The regulations of the boards of health against promiscuous expectoration should be enforced, as they are not now. The herding together of people under crowded living conditions predisposes toward pneumonia. Increased prevalence of colds, influenza, measles, whooping cough and diphtheria also increases the number of pneumonia cases.

"Abundant sunlight in the sick room limits the danger from pneumonia. It is most important that persons with pneumonia be isolated. Eating utensils used for patients should be kept separate.

"Ether anaesthesia, produced while the patient is suffering from a cold, tonsilitis, laryngitis or bronchitis, may predispose toward pneumonia by causing irritation of the respiratory tract. This can be avoided by postponement of an operation, when possible."

COUPLE HELD IN LIQUOR CASE AT EAST BOSTON

Roxbury Man and Wife Taken by Police in Auto; Try to Bribe Officer Charged

Benjamin Brody, thirty-eight years old and his wife Rose Brody, twenty-eight, of No. 739 Parker street, Roxbury, were arraigned in East Boston court today before Judge Barnes, charged with illegal transportation of liquor. The husband was also charged with attempting to bribe a policeman.

Both pleaded not guilty and their cases continued until January 24. Each furnished bail of $500.

The police allege that the automobile in which the brodys were driving had gone around Maverick square three times and then pulled up in front of a house. On the suspicion of Patrolmen Benjamin Poole and John Farnham were aroused and they approached the car. When the car was searched, twenty-five gallons of moonshine whiskey was found, the police said. In the hallway of the house they found another twenty-five gallon lot.

When the officers asked the couple to drive to the station a short distance away, they allege Brody said to them. "Do good fellows and we can fix this thing up all right." At the same time he extracted a large roll of bills from his pocket, they say. The officers refused and took them to the police station.

SALEM NURSE ATTAINS HER 92ND BIRTHDAY

Salem, Jan. 16.—Mrs. Alvina Sanborn, Salem's oldest nurse, has just celebrated her ninety-second birthday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Emma K. Pausland, 9 No. 166 Bridge street. When the hospital was opened, Mrs Sanborn became its first nurse.

Standardization of Bed Sizes Planned by Commerce Heads

By Associated Press.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Beds are to lose their individuality under standardization of the division of simplified practice of the Commerce Department. They will no longer appear in uncouth and irregular size with trick mattresses having a proclivity to slide to the floor in the hours of deepest sleep.

Standardization of beds, the department declared, means a great deal to both the bed and mattress manufacturers and the general public and the government is co-operating in the plan to keep the bed within bounds. Up to this time the statement said, "A half-size bed was anything from a park bench upward, so far as standard went."

CONTINUES CASE OF MRS. McCAW AS POISONER

Bristol, R. I., Hearing Put Off for Fortnight to Await Autopsy Report

Providence, Jan. 16.—Mrs. Ruth McCaw was arraigned before Judge Hannill in District Court in Bristol today on a charge of assault with intent to commit murder upon her stepson Lloyd McCaw. The case was continued two weeks at the request of Chief of Police Kelley, pending the filing of the report on an autopsy upon the body of Miss Elsie McCaw, Loon's sister, by State Chemist Frank H. Strickland.

Mrs. McCaw was arrested a few days before Christmas, charged with attempting to poison her step-son with arsenic. On December 29 the body of her step-daughter Elsie was exhumed and turned over to the State chemist for analysis.

Strickland explained the delay by saying he was checking over the results of his investigation carefully before reporting.

CUBA MUST CUT BUDGET TO GET $50,000,000 LOAN

Washington, Jan. 16.—The American government has notified Cuba that she may negotiate a loan of $5,000,000 in the United States, but that the conclusion of the further loan of $50,000,000 suggested by Cuba will depend upon the ability of the island authorities to further reduce the budget, it was said today at the State Department.

COUNSEL CLASH AT EDISON HEARING

MacFarland and Ives Row Over Question Put by Former to "Expert"

A demand for a complete list of all the customers of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company who are compelled to pay the "minimum charge" of 75 cents a month whether they use that amount of current or not was today served upon the Edison by Attorney Grenville S. MacFarland, counsel for the Boston American.

The demand was joined by Corporation Counsel Arthur D. Hill in the rate case in which the Boston American and the city of Boston have joined hands in the campaign to force down prices for benefit of the 10,000 customers of the Edison.

Mr. MacFarland demanded that the Edison submit to the Department of Public Utilities the number of customers who are forced to pay the 75-cent "minimum charge," how much it amounts to, how much current these customers actually use and the relative value of their contribution to the funds of the Edison.

A formal written demand was also made upon the company to tell the public how many customers it has in each of the cities served by it, what rates they pay and how much of the Edison's plant are used in each of the fortytwo cities and towns.

The serving of these demands was shortly followed by the longest and most bitter row that has marked any of the hearings.

Superintendent Louis R. Wales of the Sales Department of the Edison Company, who had been put on as the "expert" who was able to tell why the Edison charges its customers so much more than the other large cities of the country and who had been attempting to explain why the Edison charges eleven cents per kilowatt hour, as compared to three and five and one-half cents in Cleveland, refused to answer question put to him by the American's attorney.

Wales had said that the Edison distributes direct, while the Cleveland plant sells its customers alternating current.

"Then the compensating advantage of your system is simply the advantage of being able to use a storage battery in order to prevent the continuity of service?" said Mr. MacFarland.

"I refer him not to answer the question," shouted Attorney F. Manley Ives, counsel for The Ed son.

After a long row between counsel the Department went into executive session for half an hour and then returned with a verdict that the question ought to be answered.

Wales finally answered that he did not know what effect the two currents had on the cost of service to the customers.

$25,000 MORE ASKED TO FIGHT EDISON

Law Department Needs That Sum to Continue Campaign for Lower Rates

Mayor Peters today was asked an additional appropriation by the Law Department for its fight against the Edison Electric Illuminating Company.

The sum of $25,000 was asked for by Corporation Counsel Arthur D. Hill. This, however, is not available in the Reserve Fund and the lack of appropriating power, according to the Mayor, makes it necessary for him to restrict the amount to $10,000.

In a letter to the Mayor, Counsel Hill said:

"On May 2, 1921, the City Council appropriated $50,000 to be expended first, with the arbitration pending before the Department of Public Utilities in respect to the contract for street lighting with the Edison Company and second, with respect to the petition filed by Mayor Peters for a reduction in the rates charged for electricity by the company.

Since that date and before, the Law Department has been actively engaged in the necessary preparation for the effective trial of the petition and a number of hearings have been held.

Corporation Counsel Hill's report to the Mayor shows that the $50,000 appropriated on May 2 last was spent as follows: Experts, $43,483.45; stenographic services, $1,313.65; supplies, $792; equipment, $650; comptometer operator, $270; books, $209; and miscellaneous, $175. There is a balance of $2,000.

SEEK RETURN OF BANK FUND FROM LAWYERS

Recovery of $10,000 each from Robert Gallagher and Joseph A. Denison, $5,000 from Daniel V. McIsaac, $2,500 from Alphonso A. Wyman of Somerville and $1,000 from Leon R. Sykes of Brookline is sought in a suit brought by Attorney John E. Hannigan, trustee in bankruptcy of the old Quincy Trust Banking Company, which was heard in the Federal Court today. The bill charges they used the money by the Exchange Company officials out of funds the company is alleged to have obtained by fraud, and that the attorneys knew the company was insolvent. It is further charged that the money was paid about August 13, 1920, when a run on the company was in progress, as retainers in any matters that might arise against the concern.

MEXICO PUTTING ALL CHILDREN TO SCHOOL

Stevens Writes of National Educational System and New Spirit's Growth

By OTHEMAN STEVENS.

Copyrighted, 1922, by Universal Service.

Mexico City, Jan. 16.—Minister of Public Education Vasconcelos outlined to me a comprehensive plan for universal education in Mexico.

Provisional President De La Huerta selected Mr. Vasconcelos as rector of the University of Mexico, and President Obregon with the wisdom that marks his acts, selected him as Minister of Public Instruction.

Now he is helping Mexico's children to the goal of a citizenship that will entitle them to comradeship with the people of any nation. Minister Vasconcelos said:

"Let me give the American nation a sketch of what Mexico was before the revolution. The mass of the people, fourteen millions in round numbers, were essential slaves, whose labor was all for the benefit of a small group, say a million, of privileged people. It was in actual form very like the old Chinese mandarin government with the mandarins all rubbers.

NATIONAL SPIRIT CREATED.

"What the revolution has done, at the cost of many lives and the destruction of much material, has been to create a national spirit, liberty and progress. So now we have a nation of Mexicans bravely struggling with poverty and serenely and sanely facing their problems in the spirit of the common good and the advancement of humanity.

"We are doing this with none of the hatred and vengeance of the French revolution. We have had no tumbrils loaded for the Place de la Guillotine. The past is overlooked. All atrocities are handled justly.

"Mexico, with all Spanish-American countries since they achieved their independence, has organized its government on the same principles as yours. Now we intend to make those principles active in place of being as heretofore legal fictions.

"Education is the foundation of all advancement. This government has therefore given immediate support to the plan for universal schooling which is being put into action. To this end the Federal government has charge of all educational institutions.

SCHOOLING FOR ALL.

"Our first aim is to establish a schoolhouse in every locality of the republic, no matter how isolated, to the development of a plan that includes schools for Indians and a system of popular literature, of which 3,000 have been established. These will have literature some in every town of 500 or more.

"In addition we have traveling libraries, consisting of a hundred volumes of the best books placed in boxes adapted to burro transportation. These will be circulated in regions where no railroads exist. A staff of traveling teachers is being organized to visit all settlements, not only to teach Spanish, but to give training in agriculture, vocations such as carpentering, blacksmithing, masonry and the like.

"The entire system planned includes all educational facilities from the kindergarten to colleges during the entire country. Your people will understand when I say we will have a little red schoolhouse in every section Ai, and Americans will know that this will make a people that will forever be free from tyranny that has before marked our history.

"The administration is devoted to the purposes of this department. The Congress has given us forty-five million pesos to make our start, and I can predict with certainty that the beginning is sure to fulfill our hopes.

STABILITY OF GOVERNMENT.

"I cannot tell you how many little ones depend on this undertaking. You can estimate that on a basis of fourteen million people, it is not the children of the republic depends as a result of our efforts to make us a nation that will rank with the best in serenity, freedom and progress. We have proved that from this underclass do spring men and women of the highest culture, of the noblest aims and of great achievement.

"Why your government has not recognized our government I do not know, but if the question of stability enters let me say that this administration was placed in power solely by the will of the Mexican people. It is their government.

"By its acts, which have certified to the validity of its pre-election promises, the administration has shown that its action is based solely on justice and law, and that removes apprehension about its future.

"As General Obregon has said, the people do not make revolutions. It is bad government that causes them to rebel.

"It is not my purpose to enter into any argument about the attitude of your government toward ours on the question of recognition, for that does not come within my province.

A HOSPITABLE NATION.

"I can and do say, though, that if security of person and property and friendly feeling toward your people is concerned, Mexico has always been a very hospitable country toward foreigners and especially Americans, who come here to work and to accomplish and who accustom themselves to our customs and our national purposes.

"Under the present government that trait is emphasized. It is obvious that life is as safe here, perhaps safer, than in some portions of your own country, and whatever may be said of our laws by people who have a distinct purpose to create distrust, our legislation will be found in the end to be humane, just and with due regard for all classes, but with no special privileges for any one class.

"I feel assured that a people like yours, who have so magnificently proved their wise combination of the highest ideals with the practical good sense of making ideals become facts, will finally do Mexico the justice, as a sister republic, and as a most friendly neighbor, of welcoming her in the family of progressive liberty-loving nations."

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

MISS ELLEN GREENOUGH

By BETTY ALDEN.

THIS week—like last—promises several affairs in honor of various members of the bud contingent. Though there was quite naturally an obvious slowing up of debutante festivities just before the holidays January is not forgetting the debs entirely, and has still, in a manner of speaking, a few cards up its sleeve in the way of jolly entertainments.

This very evening comes the dance which Miss Hodding is giving at the Hotel Somerset for her niece, Miss Alice Onderdonk, and Miss Eleanor Musgrave, the latter the daughter of Mrs. Edith P. Musgrave of Marlboro street. Tonight's affair has every indication of proving itself a gala one, and doubtless many of the same younger set will be present who were invited to the dance which Mr. and Mrs. James Howe Proctor gave in mid-November in honor of three young debs, Miss Onderdonk, Miss Peggy Porter and Miss Eleanor Sutton, all of them members of the Junior League. This affair took place at the Proctor country seat, "Moss-Curley, "but a healthy one. It will by Hall," in Hamilton. As the dance came on a Saturday night the Proctore, and a group of their relatives living near them on the Shore, decided to make a jolly week-end of it, with the result that a large crowd of the young guests were put up at nearby estates from Friday to Sunday.

Miss Onderdonk, who is an orphan, and her aunt, Miss Hodding, have taken an apartment in Boston for the W nter.

Tomorrow evening will find a representative showing of the debs and their train of followers at the Chilton Club, where Mrs. A. Lithgow Devans is giving a dance in honor of her granddaughter. Miss Elizabeth Hamlen, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. Hamlen of Gloucester street. Preceding the dance Mrs. Hamlen is to give a dinner of sixteen covers at the Chilton Club for the ushers.

Thursday of this week finds the house dance in honor of Miss Anne Cabot occupying a prominent place on the social calendar. No less a person than Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, 2d (Ruth Cabot), will be the hostess at the occasion, to be held in Mrs. Paine's home on Beacon street. M ss Cabot, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Cabot of Chestnut Hill, is Mrs. Paine's niece.

The debbies are all prepared to make the most of the furnisht's round of galeties which is still left to them—for, after all, one is a debonly once—and there can be no more or less come to an end early next month, when the m d-year examinations at Harvard begin, and the undergrads must give up all social engagements, however tempting, for, after all, one is only an undergrad once. But the "just out" contingent may look forward with exceeding jubilation to the Harvard Junior Prom, slated for March 3, an affair at which the buds are always much in ev dence.

The week's affairs for the debutantes will close with the presentation of Miss Alice Thomas, whose aunt, Mrs. Robert H. Stevenson, Jr., of Marlboro street, is introducing her at the Chilton Club. There will be dancing.

Miss Thomas, one of the prominent debs of the Winter, is the second daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Thomas of Baltimore. The four Thomas sisters have their home in Boston on Hereford street. They are the Misses Katherine, Alice, Rosamond and Elizabeth Thomas.

With the opening of the Royal Poinciana at Palm Beach slated for today, an additional influx of society folk from various parts of the country is expected. Meanwhile, the cottages are being filled rapidly by their owners and their guests, while the hotels already open announce unusually large lists of registrants, as does the popular Everglades Club.

Though New York claims a goodly portion of members of the Palm Beach Winter colony, Boston seems to have a notably large representation of society folk Wintering at the famous Florida resort this season.

Recent arrivals from Boston include Mr. and Mrs. John S. Curtis of Beacon street, who are at their cottage, "Ocean View," in The Breakers group. Mr. Curtis is the brother of Mrs. Leonard Ahl. (Frances Curtis) who arrived there earlier in the month with Mr. Ahl, whose their villa is known as "Nautilus Cottage." Mr. and Mrs. Ahl, who are devoting much of their time at the Southern resort to fishing and golfing, have a large estate on the North Shore in Hamilton called "Meadowside."

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Harding (Harriette A. Knowles) of Dedham are expected to arrive this week at Palm Beach, where they have taken a new villa on the South Ocean Boulevard. Of other Bostonians at this resort are Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Choate, Mrs. Horace Soule, Mrs. Hobart Ames, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Barnard, Maxwell Norman and Mrs. Charles A. Munn of Washington and the Massachusetts North Shore

EXTEND JEWISH DRIVE; APPEAL FOR SPEED

More Than $100,000 Yet to Be Raised for Cause of Charity

The drive of the Federated Jewish Charities is lagging somewhat, according to reports from team leaders submitted at a luncheon at the City Club today, and the time limit of the drive has been extended from Wednesday noon to Thursday evening at 6:30.

Chairman Louis E. Kirstein of the general committee, David A. Lourie and other leaders exhorted those present to put greater personal effort into the work. The speakers declared there was money enough in the community and that the people were responding to the solicitors.

"If we fail we will be responsible, ourselves," declared Chairman Kirstein, "and I feel sure that none of us intend to be connected with a failure. The people realize their obligation and the success of this great work of charity depends upon our pressing every one who has a dollar to give."

The total subscriptions to date amount to $250,000, while the sum so to have subscribed at this time was $175,000. This leaves something over $100,000 yet to be obtained.

ROXBURY WOMAN DYING FROM GAS POISONING

Mrs Dora Lazzaro of No. 8 Jarvis place, Roxbury, is believed to be dying at the City Hospital as the result of a flow of gas in her bedroom which resulted through the alleged faulty operation of a quarter meter. Her husband, Peter Lazzaro, told police that he found his wife lying unconscious on her bed when he re rned. Gas was escaping from a jet on the wall.

According to his story, shortly after she went to bed the supply of gas was exhausted and the lights went out. He put another quarter in the meter and the flow of gas came on full strength. It is believed that the light in the bedroom went out entirely, through some means, when the flow subsided.

CURLEY SPENDS AN HOUR AT CITY HALL

Discusses "Income and Expense" Policy With Mayor Peters

Mayor-elect James M. Curley paid a visit to City Hall today and spent nearly an hour with Mayor Peters, going over the city's financial system.

Following the conference, they adopted the recommendation of the Finance Commission to place the city on an income and expense basis. The change was thought necessary for the best interests of the city. The practice has been for some of the bills incurred in one year to be paid from appropriations made the succeeding year.

This system has been in use for over twenty-five years. The Finance Commission in its last report, dealing from the law department that city treasurers have been acting illegally for years under the present program.

They also advised that this year's debts should be paid out of this year's income to avoid any further continuance of the alleged improper practice.

"The change is a radical one," said Curley, "but a healthy one. It will by Hall," in Hamilton. As the dance handicap me in some extent. All bills incurred during Mayor Peters' administration will be paid or accounted for during the administration and my administration will start fresh. There will not only be no money in the city's pocket, but there will be no pockets.

"The change is necessary in the interest of proper administration of the budget system, which has not been kept efficiently operated during the last six or seven years.

"In 1917 I had a surplus of $1,600,000, and last year Mr. Peters had a surplus of more than $400,000."

Present at the conference was Rupert S. Carman, budget commissioner originator of the income and expense system that the Finance Commission recommended. Both the Mayor-elect and Mayor Peters conferred with him in regard to many details of the new system.

Later both of them posed for the camera men. Mayor-elect provoked much mirth when he said, "The only one missing is the former fire commissioner. I sent him a fire engine that cost $2.50. He hasn't sent me a letter of congratulation as yet."

MAYOR URGES NEW BUILDING REGULATIONS

Business Structures Would Be Barred From Residential Sections by Ordinance

Mayor Peters filed today with the City Council the text of a proposed ordinance, designed to put an end to the encroachment of business buildings upon the residential districts of the city.

Under the proposed ordinance the city would be apportioned into three districts, a business, residential and unrestricted district.

Mayor Peters points out that the residence sections of Boston are in need of protection against the influx of undesirable buildings, and that under existing conditions many districts have been seriously depreciated in value, owing to the construction of obnoxious structures.

Among the chief points at which the proposed ordinance is aimed is the violation of the setback regulations. Scores of localities have depreciated in value owing to the construction or alteration of buildings beyond the setback line to the street line.

Under the terms of the ordinance, buildings and their use would be confined in residential districts to dwelling houses, hotels, educational institions, libraries, museums, public buildings, hospitals and similar structures, including small garages for private use.

The proposed ordinance provides hat the erection of hospitals in such districts would have to be approved by the Health Commissioner and the Building Commissioner.

The new ordinance would also limit the height of buildings in residential districts, to the width of the street in which it is to be constructed, but for each foot a building is set back from the street line, two feet may be added to its height.

In his statement to the council, Mayor Peters said:

"I believe that many home seekers and builders, would, if assured of the protection such an ordinance would give them, build their homes in the limits of the city instead of going to the suburbs.

"Most people do not move to the suburbs for their homes to escape higher taxation but to obtain security against such things as are obnoxious and which render home surroundings undesirable.

"Every observer has noted the shift of population in Boston from one district to another. It is principally because one district is made undesirable by business encroachments and the obnoxious use of buildings."

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.—Advertisement.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Another Ibanez Novel, "Blood and Sand," Being Prepared for Screen

By FRIEDA DAVIS

WHETHER it was the unqualified success of the Rex Ingram-Metro film version of the Ibanez novel, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," or the present popularity of Spanish plays and films in this country that prompted the producers to screen Ibanez is hard to say. Possibly it's both.

At any rate, Ibanez is coming to the fore with a vengeance. Famous Players-Lasky have bought the screen rights to "Blood and Sand" and are completing the casting and production plans before starting the actual filming. Having read the novel and seen the picture version, with Otis Skinner and Catherine Calvert in the leading roles, it comes somewhat as a surprise to hear the list chosen to play in the picture.

Rudolph Valentino will be seen as Juan Gallardo, the bull-fighter —a role he has long coveted— while Bebe Daniels and May McAvoy have the other prominent roles. Miss Daniels will doubtless have that of Dona Sol, played by Miss Calvert on the stage, while Miss McAvoy will probably cast for the unfortunate wife. After seeing such tried players in the story, it seems rather like putting "Blood and Sand" in the nursery.

It must be said that the novel is better adapted to the screen than to the stage from the standpoint of the strength and color of the story as written by Ibanez was necessarily left out in the stage version. On the screen the bull-fight scenes will be sensational features. Mexico City is comparatively near Hollywood and there bull-fighting forms one of the greatest pastimes.

"ENEMIES OF WOMEN" TOO

ANOTHER Ibanez novel to see the light of a studio is "Enemies of Women," which Cosmopolitan Productions plan to make. No information concerning the work has been given out, beyond the fact that the rights have been bought and early "shooting" is under consideration.

THE NEW CHAPLIN

THERE are whispered suggestions about the film colony that though it is publicly said: "there is but one Chaplin"; still that comedian is in a fair way of losing his laurels to another comer unless he settles down to work and makes more pictures in the course of twelve months than he has been making.

Chaplin is spending his time at present writing an account of his trip abroad. Meanwhile Harold Lloyd is busy turning out another comedy. His last, "Never Weaken," has been kept on for six weeks at one picture house, while it was featured at twenty-seven theatres simultaneously. His next, "A Sailor-Made Man," is said to outdo any he has made yet.

CHAPLIN AND HIS HEROES

LILLIAN GISH told me a story of Chaplin and his trip when she was here for the opening of "Orphans of the Storm." The comedian was asked to dinner with Barrie, Wells, Bernard Shaw and other writers whom he had wanted for years to meet.

During the dinner they all looked at him curiously. Finally Shaw, with characteristic brusqueness, said: "Well! Well! We've heard how funny you are! Go on and be funny!"

Chaplin was taken off his feet and couldn't think of a thing to do or say. Finally he stammered: "I don't perform when I'm face to meet all the celebrities I've worshipped so long!" He might well, incidentally, have turned the tables by remarking that he'd "heard how funny Shaw was" and asked him to "perform!"

"FANNIE HURST MAY COME.

THOSE who have liked "Humoresque" and "Just Around the Corner"—and there are many—will be interested in the news that their author, Fannie Hurst, is booked as a probable attraction at the opening of her first play, "Back Pay," when it comes to the Selwyn Theatre a week from tonight.

Additional interest in the affair develops when it is learned that "Back Pay" has been filmed by Cosmopolitan Productions and is now on the shelves awaiting the date of release. The continuity was written by Frances Marion, the direction was in the hands of Frank Borzage—responsible for "Humoresque"—while the leading roles are played by Seena Owen and Matt Moore. Helen MacKellar plays Miss Owen's part in the stage version.

"BEN HUR" FOR INGRAM

REX INGRAM has nearly finished work on "The Prisoner of Zenda," and the Metro forces are casting about for another story to set him on. All this, in spite of the second-guessing in their studio. Ingram is, I believe, the only one who is busy at that present days. Rupert Hughes and May Allison have completed their contracts and Bert Lytell and Viola Dana are making a six weeks' tour of the East for a series of personal appearances.

At present Marcus Loew, head of Metro, is trying to buy the rights to "Ben Hur." Long have producers been after this story, but the authors have asked too high a price. Metro is inclined to stretch the buying appropriation a trifle for Ingram, for this young director has a knack of "bringing home the bacon." No matter how expensive his films have been in the making it takes but a short time to reimburse the company, and for them to make money.

Fresh From Paris

Latest Word From Marie Suzanne

Paris, France.

PARIS manages to invest two youthful tailleurs with just the air of brisk-ness the slightly-more-than-flapper looks for in selecting such a costume. Perfectly plain lines are followed in a model of black and white checked kasha serge, at the left, with its snug, high collar of sealskin, its tight-fitting sleeves, cuffed in the sealskin and its straight, only mediately, full skirt. Black cire braid and squares of the material, with the checks running contrastingly, are used as a trimming for the bottom of the jacket, which is belted with coins and links of steel.

A TAILLEUR of hunter green broadcloth appears to be trimmed with sections of the broadcloth widely striped in dark gray in a manner that may be misleading. For the stripes may be bands of fur running up and down at regular intervals, and the fur may be moleskin. All of this occurs on a new Cheruit model that has collar and cuffs of the moleskin and whose waistline is indicated by a belt of black bakolite.

WOMEN HAVE LOST IN CHIVALRY, SAYS RABBI

The increased independence of woman has caused her to lose a good share of the chivalry which was once accorded her as her right, declared Rabbi Harry Levi in an address at Temple Israel on Commonwealth avenue. She has lost even more of the chivalrie treatment she used to receive, by her own abandonment of the admired womanly traits, he continued. "If women would receive more gentlemanliness, let her be more gentlewomanly," he added.

DECLARES 'DRY' AGENTS ARE NOW BOOTLEGGERS

Dr. Conrad, in Sermon on Prohibition, Accuses 7 Discharged Members of Wilson's Force

Seven former prohibition officers who were discharged by Prohibition Enforcement Agent Harold D. Wilson are now engaged in bootlegging.

This startling charge was made by Rev. A. Z. Conrad at the Park Street Church. He called upon the church to arouse itself in support of prohibition enforcement.

Dr. Conrad charges that Prohibition Enforcement Agent Wilson is being intentionally hampered in his enforcement work and declared that sinister forces are moving heaven and earth to prevent the proper operation of the prohibition law.

While Dr. Conrad absolved Prohibition Director Potter and Boston men active in politics from all blame, he declared that one of the greatest needs of Prohibition Enforcement Agent Wilson is the need of a telephone system not capable of being connected with Potter's office, as he said Wilson had suspicions of the other enforcement department.

Dr. Conrad said he drew his conclusions from information he received while making inquiries as a member of a committee investigating the charge that Wilson is being hampered in his work in Massachusetts.

The committee was recently formed by the Evangelical Alliance which has as its object the stimulation of public sentiment in support of the prohibition law. He declared his statements expressed his own personal opinion and that the committee would issue a statement of its own when the investigation now being made is completed.

Wilson, in his opinion, is "trying to enforce the 18th Amendment to the Constitution impartially, to create public opinion in favor of it, and that he is enforcing Christian 100 per cent. prohibitionists to enforce it."

Weymouth girls have found a use for brother's castoff army uniforms. Scores of girls are invading the popular skating places in all parts of the town arrayed in the trousers of the army uniform.

"They're better than 'knickers' and a whole lot better than clumsy old dresses," the girls declare. Weymouth's town fathers have made no objection to the fad.

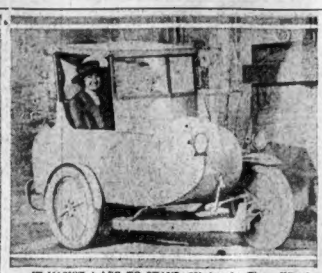
INDIGNANT CUTIES PROVE ALL WOMEN HAVEN'T KNOCK KNEES



IT HASN'T A LEG TO STAND ON, but Its Three Wheels Sure Can Cover the Ground! The new "motormobile," seating two persons comfortably, is made of aluminum, can make 45 miles an hour and run 75 miles on a gallon of gasoline. Even the crate it's shipped in can be used as a garage.

THERE'S Strings Attached to This Business! One of Italy's most picturesque industries—making macaroni. This side street "factory" is apparently not burdened by health board rules. The little chap is a customer. (Underwood.)

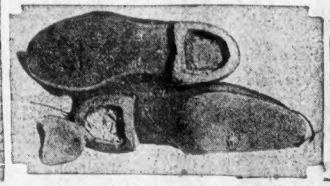
THE DOCTOR Needed to See a Few Knees Like This! Dr. Tait McKenzie of Philadelphia, who declared that all American women, even chorus girls, were knock-kneed, started something. The very idea, said those cute chorines, and they forthwith proved that the doc's judgment is slipping. With the present styles, one is at loss to explain how Dr. McKenzie ever reached such a conclusion.

"RIVER OF PEARLS!" That's the Chinese name of this charming girl of 23, Chang Horgee, who holds the distinction of being the head of Oriental Division of the French Bank of San Francisco. Came from a Canton, China, province at the age of 3. (Keystone.)

BABY O' THE BENCH! The career of Thomas F. McAndrews, just appointed magistrate in New York city, reads like a chapter from Horatio Alger. McAndrews, who is only 31, and the youngest to hold this office, was playing a piano in a hotel 15 years ago. He was encouraged to study law by Mayor Hylan, who, when he saw he was made of the "right stuff," named him to the city bench. (International.)

MISS ALICE McKIERNAN, Box 42, Sharon, Mass., is today's winner in the Pretty Motorist Test. No more pictures will be received in this test. The best of those now on hand will be published.

MRS. IZETTA JEWEL BROWN, who is winning support as the next Congressman from West Virginia. She was the woman who delivered the second speech for John W. Davis at the San Francisco convention. (Keystone.)



GOSH, WHY DON'T YUH GET A REAL ICEBOAT? That's what this youngster said as he sailed by the big ice speeder on the Shrewsbury River, N. J. This little craft has all the features of a regular sized boat. Can be easily made. (Underwood.)

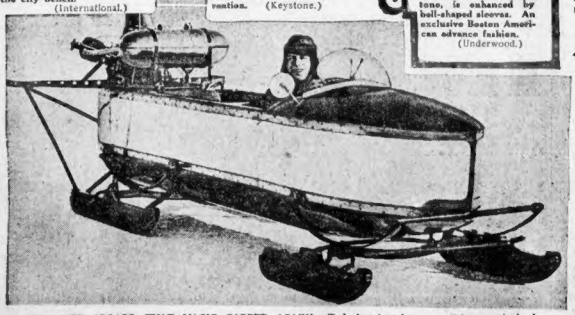
JUST THEN Six Redskins Bit the Dust! No longer will the German Nick Carters and Diamond Dicks perform their death defying stunts, as the Berlin police have seized this "literature" and ordered it burned. Here is the "hero" pyre. (International.)

LADY HONYWOOD is another titled British woman to go into trade. She has just opened 3 hotels and they are doing a thriving business. (International.)

HERE COMES SPRING! This smart little suit of gray tricotine, braided with silk of the same tone, is enhanced by ball-shaped sleeves. An exclusive Boston American advance fashion. (Underwood.)

WALKING ON DIAMONDS! Among the loot carried in the heels of these shoes were 4 large diamonds stolen from a wealthy Russian family and smuggled into the country. Arrested in Chicago. Weaver was a professional smuggler. Had brought several fortunes in gems here. (Underwood.)

SAMMIE Was Delighted! And for a good reason, because he had his picture taken wearing the hat and holding the gun used by the late Col. Roosevelt when he led his troops on that famous charge up San Juan Hill in the Spanish-American War. Both now on exhibition at N. Y. Public Library. (International.)



LET'S HOP ABOARD THAT MAGIC CARPET AGAIN! Today's trip takes us swiftly to a joyland—not that of the balmy South with its sweet perfumes—but where the snow effins gambol every hour in the day—to St. Morits in the Swiss Alps. Here every conceivable Winter sport is enjoyed, and it draws its quota of beautiful women and carefree men as well as the limpid Riviera or Cannes. Just one of the many sports is motor sledding in an affair like that pictured above. It has every feature of an automobile, but is propelled by a motor. Many New England society folk are now sojourning at St. Morits. (International.)

IT USED TO BE SAID that the early bird catches the worm, but here's an early bird that catches nickels. This parrot has been taught to call out the morning papers and takes great delight in selling San Francisco Examiners. (International.)

AS WE WERE SAYING . . . There's Nothing in the Way of Winter Fun That Can't Be Enjoyed at St. Morits. The climate is uniformly dry and cold, but not the penetrating coldness of New England. Try and think of every snow and ice sport ever played—then you get an idea how they "idle" the time away. This remarkable picture was taken during a hockey match. One of the players saved his friend from severe injury by jumping over him. (Wide World.)

A SMOKING AFFAIR! In duty bound we are obliged to report that many of our New England women and certain ladies of the West are really shocked, nay, horrified, by the introduction at a New York theatre of a smoking room FOR WOMEN ONLY. It masquerades under the bifulutin name of salon, and is exquisitely appointed. Here is Miss Helen Murphy wooing Lady Nicotine

FIFTY GUESTS FLEE PORTLAND HOTEL FIRE

Damage of $40,000 at New Chase House; Firemen in Peril

Portland, Me., Jan. 16.—Fifty guests of the New Chase House on Congress street were given a scare today by a fire which caused damage estimated at $40,000 to three small stores under the hotel windows and to adjoining property.

Those not awakened by the smoke, which penetrated the rooms, or the flames by which they were illuminated, were aroused by the night clerk.

MRS. MINA RABER,
Aurora, Ill.

"A short time ago I was one of the most nervous and miserable persons on this earth, but thanks to Tanlac I'm well and happy now," said Mrs. Mina Raber, 444 Farnsworth Ave., Aurora, Ill.

"It was just about two years ago that I began to be distressed after every meal. I had awful smothering spells at times and my heart beat so irregularly that I often thought I wouldn't live through the attack. Headaches were the bane of my existence and I shudder even now when I think of them. My back hurt me, too, and it was just agony for me to bend over and straighten up again.

"Tanlac has done for me far more than I ever expected and I'm like a different person altogether. In fact, I'm in perfect health now. In my opinion, Tanlac is the best medicine under the sun."

DE VALERA SEES TREATY AS ERIN BARRIER

Not a Stepping Stone to Complete Independence, He Declares

By DANIEL O'CONNELL.
Copyright, 1922, by the International News Service.

Dublin, Jan. 16.—Eamon De Valera, former President of the Irish Republic, refused to accept the Anglo-Irish treaty because he believes that it is not a stepping stone, but a barrier to complete independence for Ireland.

De Valera made this statement today in the first authoritative interview he has given out since the opening of the Irish peace negotiations. De Valera has improved in both health and spirits since the bitter struggle in the Dail Eireann when Arthur Griffith, founder of the Sinn Fein, ousted him from his position as President. Today he was the same smiling man the Irish knew before he made his trip to the United States.

"I am giving you the first authentic statement I have given to any press men since the beginning of the negotiations," said the Sinn Fein chieftan as he paced the floor.

De Valera spoke carefully and slowly weighed every word before he uttered it. The correspondent opened up the interview with a question which is being asked throughout Ireland, namely, why he refused to accept the Anglo-Irish treaty. De Valera paced up and down for several minutes with his hands behind his back, then he snapped out his reply.

"Because it is not a stepping stone, but a barrier in the way of complete independence. If this treaty and the Irish act resulting from it is accepted by Ireland, it certainly will be maintained that a solemn binding contract has been entered into voluntarily by the Irish people and Britain will seek to hold us to that contract.

MORAL CASE PERFECT.

"It would be cited against the claims to independence by every future Irish leader. A little over a year ago, when I sought official recognition from the government of the United States, I was able to plead as a basis Ireland's right to free national self-determination; and that the people of Ireland constituted a distinct and separate nation, ethnically and historically, and as attested by every other standard of modern science.

"I was able to contend that the Irish never voluntarily accepted British rule nor authority, but constantly challenged it through centuries, and that they had, in fact, in recent national plebiscites clearly indicated their will to live their natural life as an independent sovereign State.

"Those statements could not, at that time, be challenged.

"Circumstances surrounding the so-called act of union of Ireland with Britain so notorious that no informed person would seriously hold that act constituted a valid contract.

"In Irish history there is not a single instance of the Irish people voluntarily bending the knee to British authority. Ireland's moral case is perfect. There never was a spiritual surrender.

"Now this treaty, if ratified by the people, will determine our whole national position. Our people do not realize this. I know the Irish policy of dominant political leaders of the last century and the present century up to the time of Redmond's death has so affected the mental background of all who are above middle age, that they slip back quite easily over the last decade as if it had not existed, regarding this treaty from the standpoint merely of a home rule act that cannot set bounds to the onward march of the nation.'

"Whether expedient or not, Parnell's attitude toward home rule acts was fundamentally and logically sound. The attitude of those who approach the present treaty from the same standpoint is unsound.

"I can accept and enjoy freedom as my jailer gives me and without dishonor use it to escape completely from his hands, provided I have to give no understanding to remain as his prisoner. But if I give a parole it is different. I then bind myself not to escape. I make myself his prisoner by my act. If Ireland wants to be free she should not give her parole to remain a prisoner.

"The Nationalists, to support the present treaty, are of two classes: First, those of whom accept the freedom promised by the treaty as full satisfaction for our national claim. Secondly, those like Mike Collins, who would have us accept the treaty simply as a further installment from Great Britain.

"But both are wrong, for on the one hand, it is incomplete satisfaction; on the other, in the guise of treaty or contract it cannot be accepted in the light of an installment.

INDEPENDENCE ABANDONED.

"To the world it will be made to appear that the Irish people, who, three years ago declared in the solemnest manner their independence and who now voluntarily abandon their independence and republican form of government, accept, instead, inclusion in the British Empires with all its implications with the people of Britain to accept the British Monarch and Imperial Parliament as the fount of all authority.

"The summing up of the plain people is that the treaty will leave them free from English interference as are the people of Canada, Australia and Africa, but Ireland is not 3,000 or 4,000 or 9,000 miles away from England. Ireland is not a huge continent like Canada, Africa and Australia that could support and develop a population larger than the United States, and which England consequently is unlikely to challenge. Nor are the historical relations between Britain and these countries the same as the historical relations of Ireland and Britain.

"He is an incredulous person, indeed, who believes that authority which is but a symbolic shadow of that of Canada, Australia or Africa is intended to remain a similar shadow for Ireland.

SEIZED BOTTLES OF SYNTHETIC COCAINE

SMUGGLED INTO U. S. FROM GERMANY

BILL PROVIDES JAIL TERM FOR DRUG SELLERS

dict believes it is a necessity to his health and well-being.

There are more than 65,000 drug addicts in Massachusetts alone, in the whole country the number has been estimated at 2,000,000—and growing fast.

Federal and State committees, which have investigated the drug peril, declare that fully 50 per cent. of the narcotics which come into the United States are used by drug addicts and new victims. This traffic is in the hands of the "dope" pedlars.

The law at present in Massachusetts provides for a maximum term of three years or not over a $2,000 fine for "dope" pedlars and a maximum penalty of two and a half years in a house of correction, or not over $1,000 fine for persons illegally having narcotics in their possession.

PUNISHMENT TOO LIGHT.

Then the person caught with a hypodermic syringe or needle that has not been secured by a proper prescription escapes with not over six months in jail, or not over $100 fine.

Whoever allows his premises to be frequented by habitual drug users for the purpose of consuming the "dope," is deemed a keeper of a nuisance and his maximum penalty is one year in jail or not over a $100 fine.

But investigation shows that the maximum penalties are seldom given. More often it is a few months in the House of Correction, a small fine or the case is filed.

The Boston American has found sentiment general that light punishment is largely responsible for the appalling proportions of the drug traffic.

Believing that violators of the narcotic law show be given more severe punishment, Representative Wragg has introduced a bill setting minimum sentences.

Governor Cox in his inaugural message recommended that the Legislature look into the drug situation.

The bill now before the Legislature provides that keepers of "dope" nuisances should suffer a minimum sentence of three months and a maximum penalty of two years.

Those possessing narcotics illegally would be given not less than three months in jail, and the maximum would be two and a half years.

For the alleged sale of drugs—aimed at the "dope" pedlars—the minimum is one year and the maximum is five years in prison.

A three months' minimum and one year maximum sentence is provided for illegal possession of a hypodermic syringe or needle.

Fines would be entirely eliminated. Experience has taught that "dope" pedlars do not chafe under fines. They make fortunes in a few weeks. "Jumping" bail is common, and if they "do" a few months in jail they soon make up for "lost time" when they return to the illicit traffic.

SECOND OFFENCE A FELONY.

In the case of a drug addict found with narcotics or a hypodermic syringe in his possession, a minimum of three months in jail gives him an opportunity to get rid of the habit. Where the user has been afflicted for a long time, a longer term in jail gives him time to strengthen his ability to refrain from returning to the drug.

California's law provides that for the first offence in selling narcotics a maximum penalty of one year in prison and a minimum of 180 days. For the second offence, the minimum is one year and the maximum is five years.

For the first offense of possessing narcotics illegally the maximum is 180 days and the minimum is ninety days or a fine, but the second offense is considered a felony and the penalty is from one to five years.

One-Half of Inmates at Crittenton Home Are Below 20 Years

Seventeen per cent. of the girls admitted to the Florence Crittenton Maternity Home and Hospital during 1921 were between thirteen and sixteen years old, according to figures read at the annual meeting of the Florence Crittenton League of Compassion today.

Thirty-five per cent. were between seventeen and nineteen, thirty-seven between twenty and twenty-three, and only eleven per cent. above twenty-four.

Eighty-one per cent. of the girls were American born, thirteen per cent. came from Canada and the Provinces, and only six per cent. were foreign born.

Forty per cent. of all the inmates of the home had received high school education.

The following officers were re-elected: Rev. Howard H. Chidley, president of the league; G. S. Mumford, treasurer, and C. R. Preston, secretary.

SYNTHETIC DRUG FROM GERMANY A NEW PERIL

Boston is being flooded with synthetic cocaine from Germany.

Federal narcotic agents here seized several bottles of "Made in Germany" cocaine, and it is more deadly than the genuine "snow" that comes from the coca leaves.

The stuff is being smuggled into this country for sale in the illicit market. It resembles the flakey cocaine commonly seen and sold almost as freely as candy, on the street of Boston and New England.

But the "kick" in the German product is said by "dope fiends" to be 100 per cent. stronger than the genuine article.

Chemists who have analyzed the German product say that it is made from coal tar.

LARGE QUANTITY SEIZED.

Germany has startled the world by her synthetic gold, rubber, and other substitutes for the genuine products, but in spreading synthetic cocaine, she has added another problem, to assist in suppressing the "dope" traffic, which is increasing by leaps and bounds all over the country.

The "dope" seized by the Federal authorities in a raid is neatly put up in brown bottles of varying sizes, from one gram up. They are sealed and bear German trademarks. Some bottles have the German double-eagle stamped on them.

A three-ounce bottle bore the name of E. Merck of Darmstadt, Germany. It was labeled "cocaine hydrochloric purius. Ingelheim. C. H. Boehringer Sohn."

None of the synthetic cocaine bore the revenue stamp, indicating that duty had not been paid. That the stuff is being smuggled into this country on an increasing scale is evident from reports in many cities.

A large quantity was seized in Memphis, Tenn., and the Federal agents are making every effort to keep out this new product.

There is some doubt as to whether the Harrison Narcotic Law covers synthetic narcotics. In many States it would not be illegal to deal in the stuff, provided revenue laws had been complied with.

ALLEN ADJUSTS TROUBLE OVER PONZI FEES

Declares "People's Lawyers," Who Insist on Percentage, Violate Conditions

Attorney-General J. Weston Allen today declared that any attempt by the public counsel to collect fees from the Charles Ponzi noteholders who are unable to employ lawyers of their own was a violation of the conditions under which the "people's lawyers" were appointed.

Allen admitted that numerous complaints had been received from Lawrence that Attorney Lewis H. Schwartz is imposing a fee of 10 per cent. upon the Ponzi creditors whose notes he has had redeemed for them.

Scores of Lawrence complainants assert that Schwartz told the Ponzi trustees send their checks to him in order that he would be sure of getting his commission. Schwartz, who was appointed by Allen as a "people's lawyer" at Lawrence in the Ponzi and Securities Exchange cases, claimed he has been obliged to give weeks of his time to presenting the proofs of claim of the Ponzi noteholders, many of whom were unable to read or write, and that Allen had authorized him to charge for his services.

Complaints became so numerous that Allen requested Schwartz to come to Boston to talk over the situation. Allen stated today that the matter had since been "adjusted."

"The question is entirely one of honor between the public counsel and the noteholders," said Allen. "I appointed these counsel in various cities of the State to assist the 12,000 people who had notes of Charles Ponzi or of the Securities Exchange Company.

"At the time of their appointment I sent a letter to each of the noteholders in which I said, 'This list of attorneys has been prepared by this department, acting with the Legal Aid Society, and those whose names are included have agreed to act without compensation for those noteholders WHO CANNOT AFFORD TO EMPLOY COUNSEL.'

"These counsel have all agreed to give their services free to any person who is finding trouble in getting counsel of their own to understand that all services Schwartz is requesting those who ask him to make their proof of claim and who say they are unable to pay for his services, to sign a statement to the effect that they are in fact unable to pay.

"No person is required to go to the public counsel unless he chooses to do so. Most of the counsel brought out the State have given their services absolutely without cost. I do not want any noteholder to pay any counsel unless he feels that he can afford to do so."

New York, Jan. 16.—Frank Frisch, New York Giant third baseman, is to be married to Miss Ada Lucy of the Bronx, it became known today. The wedding will take place next Winter.

DUBLIN CASTLE TURNED OVER TO THE IRISH

British Relinquish Seat of Power Held by Them for 700 Years

By International News Service.

Dublin, Jan. 16.—Dublin Castle, for more than 700 years the seat of British authority in Ireland, was the scene of an historic event today, when Lord Fitz Alan, the British Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, formally relinquished his powers to the Irish Provisional Government.

The crowd had been waiting in the cold for hours before three powerful motor cars bearing Collins and his colleagues swung toward the gates. At the sight of Collins seated in the first automobile, the crowd went wild, hailing him as "Conqueror Mickey."

During the two years of guerrilla warfare, when Collins successfully eluded the efforts of Dublin Castle to find him, he had completely captured the Irish imagination.

By JOCK HUTCHISON

I have seen a great deal more of California golf courses and golfers since my last article written out here.

Long Jim Barnes and myself got the surprise of our trip when we suffered a setback at the hands of John Black and Abe Espinosa, who defeated us over the thirty-six hole route by a margin of 5 and 4. This pair is regarded as California's greatest golf team and we are convinced that they can live up to their reputation.

John Black has been overlooking a great opportunity by not playing in more open championships. He played beautifully on this occasion and upset our calculations more than once by holding our long approaches, or sinking unusually long putts. He appeared to possess plenty of golf nerve as he was continually doing this sort of thing when success meant a win or a halved hole.

His score for the day figured out two 72s. The Californian would do well in open championships. He was not unknown to us by any means, as he played at Brae Burn in 1919, but failed to make much of an impression except in his practice rounds, which were very good. With his partner, Abe Espinosa, a Spaniard, he came East that year, but they never have played in an open since. Abe is a grand golfer also and should do better with more tournament experience.

This 5 and 4 beating was the worst we have suffered so far. Black, with his partner, has twice been instrumental in defeating Barnes and myself, and the first appears to have stirred up all of the Pacific Coast. With the two match wins that Barnes and I brought West golfers here doubted the ability of any of the local talent to stop us. So now that we are no longer the unconquerable demons we were advertised to be interest in our matches has increased. The stock of the California golfer has risen. The Oakland Junk is not one of California's best, but it is a good golf course with many fine holes. An expert can score well, but a duffer would find trouble. We have no alibis to offer except that we were outplayed on this occasion.

I have had a chance to look at some of the courses around Los Angeles recently and was greatly surprised to find so many good ones. The people of this golden State, long famed for its athletics, will sooner or later send East golfers who will carry away our championships just as they have taken tennis, bicycle racing, boxing and football honors.

* * *

No golfer has a chance to develop a championship game unless he has a championship course to play on week in and week out. California has courses that are quite up to the standard of the East on the average. On some of them, there is great room for improvement, but the members of these clubs realize it and are fast making plans for better holes and longer courses with modern trapping.

Years ago it was not thought possible to have anything but sand greens. Now the finest green out here is almost a thing of the past. Those clubs which still have them are planning to change. There are not only grass greens but they are excellent greens that would compare with those back East.

The Pasadena Golf Club has greens that are beautiful and just as fast and smooth as the finest greens to the eye. The golfer who cannot score well on such greens and fairways has only himself to blame.

It seems as if everyone plays golf in California or is interested in the game. Women as well as the men are devotees of the sport and they show in their conversation that they know the game.

Barnes and I are not strangers in a strange land, as many Easterners are found spending the Winter and at most every tee we see some familiar fact in the gallery. This helps a lot sometimes. Californians may not be used to big championships but the spectators here observe every rule of golf etiquette. Not even in England or Scotland are the galleries better behaved, and over there it is considered a great breach of good manner to break a course rule when in the gallery.

Even the ever-present camera man has kept his place and not bothered us in making shots. Taking golf pictures is a difficult thing, but no player really minds the camera man's fiend if he does the snapping at the right time.

It is the surprise of the little click that annoys one, especially if it happens just as the club is coming into the ball. The camera man should know this and not spoil a shot that may be very costly to the player.

Little noises disturb golfers. Nearly every one beginning the game makes light of this and usually tell you that nothing disturbs him. I know baseball players who are used to pandemonium from the grand stand and Dutchers when they are at bat, but who are bothered by the least little thing when making a golf shot.

It helps to break one's concentrator, and once having had your attention attracted elsewhere it is hard to get your thinking faculties together again.

If one stands behind a golfer while playing, it is likely to be very annoying, but if the line behind his is completely closed, it is a different matter. Playing before a big gallery is not difficult and one is hardly conscious of the fact that so many are around it is essential for everyone to remain perfectly quiet while the player is driving for if a golfer looks up on a putt it is just as fatal as if he looked up on a drive. The shot is wasted.

I know a golfer who was never conscious of the fact that a train passing close by might annoy him but when attention was called to it one day by his caddy who advised him to wait till the train passed before he played, he decided that it was to wait until the train got well out of sight before he could settle himself to make the shot.

FAN SAYS BUY RED SOX BY SUBSCRIPTION

Boston's baseball public is aroused over the utter dismantling of the once favorite and popular Red Sox, and even the recent acquisition of Joe Dugan does not make the fans feel any more amiable towards the wrecking crew. That Frazee should be forced to sell out seems to be the consensus of opinion. Many more declare they will not pay any more money to see Red Sox games at Fenway Park.

Another fan endorses the idea of a popular subscription to buy one Frazee. He admits that the club is well junked, but says it's the only way to save Boston's face.

Some of the latest letters follow:

Sporting Editor:

Dear Sir—After reading your many letters in regard to Boston New York graft deals and the latest assignments of same, I have a suppose this: Get a price from Frazee, then start a popular subscription for the Red Sox fund and buy the "junk" that's left. And what about getting the profits up to the Polo Grounds, the Baseball Fund, and as the saying goes in this country "there's no graft in this fund, neither would it come under the supervision of the most rabid newspaper, the Boston American. An absurd proposition, but why not? J. F. KAY.

Sporting Editor:

Dear Sir—I gives me great pleasure to have the opportunity to let you know what I think of the disgraceful way the old Boston Red Sox baseball team has been degraded. Since coming across the water from Europe I am a lover of baseball. I go every day from Fenway Park if every fan does the same as I do, the Red Sox would be forced to sell at a much lower price than he is now asking, and thus give a real team a chance to buy them. The fans can still see ball games out in Braves Field, where there is an owner of whom Boston should be proud. Hoping that every good fan will agree with me, and that Frazee in his present ownership, I am, sincerely yours, BOSTON HUMAN MAN.

Sporting Editor:

Dear Sir—Last evening a "fan" in a letter said we showed gameness. To sport would not agree with him. To sport would mean to buy a ticket to see the Red Sox play. Why should we help to pay Frazee's debts? Not I. Peck. The players will get their salaries just the same. Even if the team is to be disorganized Frazee has enough money to get along. Frazee is interested in the Yanks to the extent of one $ in it. Stevens Field for my next season. Great working hard for Frazee. Let him get it. BOB CONNELLY.

Boston.

Sporting Editor:

Dear Sir—I am very much interested in the Red Sox and Braves, especially in the Red Sox. I think that Frazee ought to be caned out of baseball. I think we should put up a subscription for him instead of breaking up the Red Sox team and killing the baseball game. I think Frazee ought to sell or quit, because most of the 1923 fans will be camping out in Braves Field next year.

P. S.—I am in the Rankin School, eighth grade, thirteen years old and I am interested very much in baseball and hope to represent some team some time. Yours truly,

BOY SMITH.

Brookline.

How Can Red Sox Be Saved for Boston?

Boston fans have their own ideas about the Red Sox. Some think Owner Frazee has completely wrecked the team. Others believe there is still hope of rebuilding a ball club from the ruins.

The American League situation is a big thing in sports here just now. A consensus of Fan opinion would do more to hun out the troubles than anything else. Harsh, but restricted, criticism hasn't helped much. A real show-down of sentiment might.

Write your ideas on the matter in to the sporting editor. If you think the recent trades helped say so; if you think otherwise, say so.

Address letters to Sporting Editor, Boston American, No. 39 Summer street. All letters will be published.

BIG WRESTLING BOUTS AT GRAND OPERA HOUSE

The big wrestling carnival to be staged at the Grand Opera House Thursday night is attracting much attention. The main bout brings together Paul Bowser of Boston against Cyclone Ross of New York.

The latter has appeared here in numerous contests and he is a regular Cyclone and tears into his opponents and asks no quarter. He is the wrestling instructor at George Bodmer's gymnasium in New York and consequently is in the pink of condition.

In the semi-final Coen Livingston, world's champion lady wrestler, meets "Bobbie" Miller of Gloucester, and Charley Mellen will clash with Joe Zbyszko, the Polish wonder. The Grand Opera House box office will be open all day Thursday and the downtown office is located at the Howard Theatre.

Big Teams Go to Memphis

Memphis baseball fans will see many prominent ball players in action during Spring training. The following teams have been booked for exhibition games in the Tennessee metropolis: New York Yanks, Brooklyn St. Louis Browns, New York Giants, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Minneapolis and Milwaukee.

TOLEDO ADOPTS ADDED MONEY SYSTEM

Also Accepts the Two in Three Heat Plan for the Early Closing Events

Radical changes in the racing systems as well as in the matter of purses will feature the Grand Circuit meeting at Toledo this season, according to Secretary Bryce, who outlined the plans under consideration while in attendance at the meeting of the stewards of the major circuit at Cleveland.

The partial abandonment of the three-heat racing system in favor of the two in three system and the adoption of the added money system for the early closing events, as recommended by the Harness Horse Association, are two of the changes which will be instituted there this coming Summer.

The Harness Horse Association, although a comparatively new organization, has come to be a powerful factor in racing affairs, especially in the Central Western States.

It has made its chief fight for the added money plan; "all entrance money added to the stake and no deductions from the money winners," is the slogan of the H. H. A. and apparently it has finally broken into the Grand Circuit, as Bryce announced the early closing events at Toledo, both meetings, will be raced on this plan.

Toledo will give $2,500 or $3,000 added money, where they formerly gave $5,000 stakes on the old plan. This new system has proven to be much more satisfactory to the horsemen in the West.

While the early closing events will probably be raced on the three-heat plan it is the intention to apply the shorter two in three to the late closing purse events.

Time was when the majority of the races on the Grand Circuit were raced on the old three in five system. A rule of late years has been that there was a gradual change to the three-heat system, until at least 76 per cent. of the Big Ring races were on that plan; now the tendency is to still further shorten the race plan by the adoption of the two in three plan.

It is quite likely that North Randall and other Grand Circuit meetings will also stage a lot of two in three races; Lexington raced most of its program that way last Fall.

MAT MEN READY TO BATTLE FOR TITLE

Both Renato Gardini and Jimmy London, the two wrestling stars who are to clash tomorrow night in Mechanics Building, were guests of groups of their countrymen yesterday afternoon and last night.

London and Gardini each made speaches in which they told their hearers of their chances and their hopes.

To the Greeks of Greater Boston, among whom were members of the Young Men's Greek Fraternity, London said that he had heard Gardini was to claim the championship of Greece in the event of his success.

"All I can say to Gardini in reply is that after the contest I will still retain the championship of Greece, and will also be the champion of Italy."

BASKETBALL GAMES AT WEYMOUTH CELEBRATION

The Weymouth A. A., as part of Weymouth's tercentenary celebration, will arrange games with some of the fastest basketball teams in the State to be played on the home floor in East Weymouth.

Two games away from home will be played this week.

The Canton K. of C. will be the opposition tomorrow night at Canton and the fast Bridgewater Legion team will play here on Saturday night in attraction in Bridgewater on Saturday.

ICE FISHING PROVES POPULAR IN WEYMOUTH

Fishing through the ice in severe weather may not be the best of sports but the enterprising residents of Weymouth find it a profitable one. Scores of men have purchased the necessary fishing tackle and set traps in the ice on the Weymouth Fore River, where they are rewarded by catches.

COLUMBIA AND TIGERS ON MAINE SCHEDULE

Orono, Me., Jan. 11[illegible]—University of Maine rifle team will compete with Yale, Princeton, Harvard, Columbia and other colleges, according to the schedule announced by Manager C. Weston Steward, '24. Six matches will be fired in the National Rifle Association in addition to the college games.

News in Pictures—never such a quantity of pictures about people and events as printed every day in the Boston Daily Advertiser, New England's Great Pictorial Newspaper.

DUNDEE PICKED TO WIN VERDICT OVER WHITE IN TITLE BOUT

By JACK CONWAY

Johnny Dundee and Charley White are eagerly waiting for the sound of the bell which will start their ten-round battle at the Faneuil A. C.'s show at Mechanics Building tonight. The rival fighters each declare they are in splendid physical condition and prepared to battle at a torrid clip.

It is the most important lightweight bout to be booked by a Massachusetts club since th eboxing law went into effect and the battle will go down into two of the world's foremost lightweights. Both men have fought Champion Benny Leonard with credit to themselves.

It will be the third meeting between these celebrated boxers. There has never been a decision shown them when it has come to proficiency in the grand old game of his and get away. Their last tussle was staged in New York last Summer and was called a draw.

As no draws are permitted in Massachusetts, either Dundee or White will be crowned as victor this p. m. The Boxing Commission has made plans to have the bout under the direction of some of its most expert officials so that neither boxer will be in a position to register a protest if the decision is rendered against him.

White and Dundee have engaged in some of their most thrilling battles in Boston. Back in 1918 and 1919 White was a frequent visitor to the old Boston Arena, where he knocked out a host of our New England light weights. Dundee, too, was hopping over to Boston frequently, and hoping his way to victory over all kinds of opposition.

* * *

There will also be three eight-round bouts.

Johnny Mahoney announces that there are still many choice seats to be had at the Faneuil Club's office, No. 39 Court street.

Young Gould, Brockton lightweight, will have Joe Avilla as an opponent in a ten-round bout at Lowell tomorrow night. The match was originally booked for Thursday night, but the date was moved forward. Gould has won his last three starts, defeating Young Gibbs of Woonsocket, Hanmeying Howe and Walter Butler. Avilla, however, is sure to give Goodwin's protege plenty of opposition.

The St. Joseph's T. A. Society will stage an open amateur boxing tournament at Commercial Hall, Bowdoin square, Friday evening. There will be bouts at 118, 125, 135, 147 and 158 pounds. Matinee tries close Thursday with Frank Hannon, No. 13 Cambridge street. This show is sure to furnish plenty of lively competition.

The A. A. U. C. interclub bouts will be held at Mechanics Building on January 25. Besides the interclub matches there will be an open class at 135 pounds.

Reservations for both of these amateur shows may be secured at room 12, No. 28 School street.

Woonsocket promoters are trying to arrange for a bout between Mickey Travers and Terry Martin. The latter is a protege of Johnny Curtin at Providence. Vic Richardson, manager of Travers, is also prepared to post a substantial forfeit to bind a match between his protege and Bobby Josephs. A Travers-Josephs tussle would make a good attraction for any of our New England clubs.

North Shore fans will see an action show at the Casino A. C., Lynn, tonight. The card which Jack Murphy has scheduled consists of three bouts and a six-rounder between boys who are well known as satisfactory performers.

In the windup Tommy Corbley of Gloucester, a lightweight, who cleaned up all the boys in that class in Western New York, and who topped his record by beating Red Ford of Medford at Auburn, will meet Tony Julian of Brockton, a rugged fellow who is well known to the fans.

Barney McAtee, the smart little South Boston hitter who has plenty of ring intelligence as well as an ability to do massive hard punching, will find the going rough in a ten-rounder with Roger Rowan, instructor of boxing at Brown University.

In the preliminary Joe Blair of Lynn and Jimmy Plaza of Beverly, who have mixed in two real scraps at the Lynn club, will meet for the third time.

The Boxing Menu

Tonight—Faneuil A. C., Mechanics Building: Johnny Dundee vs. Charley White, ten rounds. Rock the fifteen and get down on Dundee. Frank Magrien vs. Freddy Warren, eight rounds. Toss a coin to name the winner. Harry Gaines vs. Neddo Flynn, eight rounds. The Neddo person looks good. Mickey Kirst vs. Willie Harmon, eight rounds. Kirst will win.

Casino A. C., Lynn—Tommy Corbley vs. Tony Julian, ten rounds. Corbley is our selection and it is no fish story. Frankie Ryan vs. Harry Mansell, ten rounds. Ryan should take the decision. Barney McAtee vs. Buster Brown, ten rounds. McAttee's the kid who'll win. Joe Blair vs. Jimmy Plaza, six rounds. Even the boys themselves couldn't pick this one.

Friday—St. Joseph's A. A., amateur boxing tournament at Commercial Hall, Bowdoin square.

FIRST GAME IN WINSOR CUP SERIES TONIGHT

Tonight the B. A. A. and Melrose teams will open the Winsor cup hockey series at the Arena. It is expected that the Unicorn will come back with a vengeance. Tech and Boston College will meet in the other game of the twil bill.

The Engineers and the Eagles engaged in a hot seven game series last year. They played anything but genteel hockey. The Institute team showed in their game with Dalhousie that they have developed the knack of body checking.

Boston College will be without George Curry, star forward, on account of a injured leg. Coach Fred Rocque will use Jerry Culhane in his position. The other forwards will be Sammy Foley and Captain Leo Hughes.

Several details need to be arranged before Pere Marquette and Westminster take the ice Wednesday night. The Knights would like to have Jimmy Brown of Philadelphia referee, if two local men are selected the Knights will insist on Ernie Dooly as one.

The Westminsters declare they will use Carson Cooper in their forward line Wednesday, but they are likely to be surprised. It is alleged that Cooper played hockey in Ontario since the season started, and although he was registered here December 18, is not eligible for local competition according to the interpretation of the rules.

Manager Synnott of the Knights has telegraphed A. W. Hewitt of the Ontario Hockey Association seeking a statement of Cooper's case. Synnott says Pere Marquette will not play against Cooper. He will have the support of the B. A. A. and Melrose in his efforts to have the alleged tourist player barred from local competition.

Pere Marquette is in first place in the United States League by virtue of their two victories over the Quakers here and Nicholas teams at Philadelphia last week.

The conference of the athletic committee of head masters of Boston's high schools today will be a briefing session that will give followers of school sport and those in authority much to talk about. The meeting will gather at the suggestion of Nathaniel C. Young, Director of Physical Training, and last night on his recent ruling relative to his new plans which makes a schoolboy ineligible to compete in scholastic ranks until he is nineteen years of age.

The session will prove to be a merry one, for a number of coaches in the ranks of those present do not like the new rule. These coaches will ask one of the happenings of the meeting will be given to the press, so confused is the matter.

It is rumored that one closely connected with the Mason street office and a headmaster of one of our leading high schools has reprimanded a certain official for using his name in endorsing a certain plan, and has sent apologies to other headmasters on the athletic committee.

As matters now stand it looks very much as though the present rule allows a schoolboy to compete on four years, which omitting those in the lower forms, would mean the graduation of the Freshmen, Sophomore and Junior classes. Naturally the Seniors would have a big advantage over the others, which if not curbed in the near future, will mean the downfall of athletics in Greater Boston schools.

It is rumored that some outside party, one not affiliated with the schools, will get action in the matter.

The question is being discussed by many coaches and followers of sport, and it is believed that if present conditions are allowed to continue for the next few years, Boston will be relegated to the second class in the matter of high school athletics.

It has been found that the rule governing the presentation of medals and prizes to Boston schoolboys has sufficient loopholes to allow a Boston schoolboy to compete in the various indoor track meets this Winter. A section of the rule reads "no medals will be given the winner of any track event under the auspices of

Says Ice Skating Is Good For Lazy People Because It Keeps Them Sitting Down So Much of the Time

Ice skating is a great sport for lazy people. They like it because they're sitting down so much of the time.

People who skate soon discover that there are other places for [illegible] besides sofas.

If you fall down once in a while and let that spoil you. Remember, nothing can spoil as long as it's on [illegible]

Ice skaters call the ice ponds [illegible] made so many of the skaters [illegible] there.

A man fell down and got water [illegible] ice. Another one slipped and [illegible] the ice with his head and for [illegible] three weeks he had water on the mind.

A skater doesn't spend all of his time falling down, he spends half of it getting up.

To be a good skater you've got to be used to the cold. That's why so many apartment house janitors are professionals.

One guy was skating with his girl and he wanted to propose, but he didn't know how to start. Two minutes later he fell on his head and that broke the ice.

A married couple were having an argument and it ended that the [illegible] melted and they both drowned.

A lot of skating is done at night. You may think it's too dark, but every time you fall there are plenty of illuminations.

"BACK PAY"

The Story of a Girl's Soul Redeemed Through Love

A Serial of a Country Girl Who Seeks Happiness in the Maelstrom of the Metropolis

("Back Pay") has been created into an unusual photoplay by Cosmopolitan Productions, direction of Frank Borzage; scenario by Frances Marion; it will be released as a Paramount picture.)

Seena Vernon Novelized

By Jane McLean

THE little town of Demopolis had this afternoon—it were best for enough from New York, that whirlpool of energy and dazzling lights and riches, to visualize that wonderful city as a glorified mirage.

The two trains that daily shoot down the single track road bound for the Hudson and the Metropolis seemed the rainbows to most of the people of the town among the babes at the end of which lay untold pots of gold

Many of the people in Demopolis had never made that trip, but they all looked forward to it, and no one more ardently than Hester Benton, one of the boarders at Mrs. Simmons's bear like house.

Hester was pretty—Hester was ambitious, and the town was all too for her like one of those dead places destined to grow deader and deader, made to stifle hope, and slowly out of tune with the onward trend of the times.

For several years she had worked as a clerk in the village dry goods for her home at Mrs. Simmons'. For all those years she had heard Mr. Pannie, the owner of the general store, discourse on the price of staples or exchange bromidic remarks with Skerritt, the undertaker, and of late she had endured the clownish pranks of Bill Wills and Jimmy Hynes, who took a fiendish delight in annoying two precise spinsters of the prosaic names of Clapp and an aged inventor named Smith.

A Yearning to Go

For all these years Hester had sat down to the same sort of meals, the same sort of puddings, the same sort of roasts; she could tell what day of the week it was by the kind of fast. She could tell what day of the week it was by looking at the dinner table, and the only solution to the dull grind, the deadly routine, [illegible] was the dim form of the [illegible] Jerry Hopkins.

Many [illegible] she had resigned from the boarding house in time to watch the train slowly start on its way to the unknown. More than once she had wished herself aboard, long whirled toward the place where endeavor counted and where success was certain.

It was May Day and in Demopolis May Day meant something it meant a picnic in which all the young people and the old people took part. It meant a fine ride along a cool brook to a delightful glen [illegible] the freshness of early Spring, it meant games and the giving [illegible] that meant little or [illegible] love and gifts. It was [illegible] the Spring, the lovers' and the heart lights.

There was talk at the boarding house to-day the departure for the ride, but in spite of the holiday air, Mr. Jones held forth on the price of beans and Mr. Skerritt commiserated with the difficulties of the undertaking trade in a place where [illegible] was absent now and epidemics could not be counted on in time of need.

Not Enthusiastic

As though to divert from this gloomy topic, Willy Hanks jumped from the table and vanished into the hall, reappearing with a false mustache and a horrible grin, to the horror of the spinsters and the disgust of Hester.

She had no appetite and she answered the questions of her fellow boarders, scarcely thinking what she was saying

"You're going to the picnic, ain't you?" asked Skerritt, breaking off from the woes of the undertaking fraternity to address her.

"You don't say it as though you was very glad," said the elder Miss Clipp.

"Don't I?" answered Hester, conscious that she didn't.

"If I had a fine young fella' like Jerry Hawthorne to take me you bet your life I'd be gay," announced Mr. Smith

"Oh, Jerry's going to take you, is he?" put in the younger Miss Clipp.

I must say boys is most attentive—going in the buggy?"

"I guess so," said Hester, flushing a little.

"When I was a girl," went on Miss Clipp, "we always went in threes. Nowadays a girl can do almost anything."

"And get away with it," put in Mr. Pannie. "Yes, street according to them New York people that was here last Summer, they ain't nothin' a girl can't do any more."

"It's all right, ain't it?" interrogated Mrs. Simmons from the head of the table. "Ain't I earnin' my own livin' and ain't I got a right to what I likes?"

"I guess so," said Hester, flushing a little.

"Were talkin' about young women," said Mr. Smith innocently.

"Oh, you are!" retorted Mrs. Simmons, bristling. "Let me tell you, Mr. Smith, just because you've got one foot in the grave I'm not there by a long ways—so, sir—I'm a good deal younger than some of them dolled up things I seen automobiling through here, let me tell you that."

Mr. Smith hastened to apologize, and in the midst of his somewhat tortuous effort Hester slipped out of the room to her own small apartment two flights up—a room she had occupied ever since the death of her mother had thrown her on her own resources.

Discontent was in her soul—impatience was in her eyes as she fixed her hair and prepared herself to meet Jerry down the road. Before she went out she sat brooding by the window wondering how much longer she could stand the daily grind of the stupid little town whose very smallness stifled her whose daily routine stirred her into rebellion

Off to the Picnic

The sound of singing as a wagon decorated with wreaths of spring blossoms and filled with boys and girls in holiday attire roused her. She put on her hat and went out to meet Jerry.

Mrs. Simmons saw her as she passed the dining room door: so did the elder Miss Clipp.

"Sometimes I reckon Hester Bevins thinks she is too good for us folks," she volunteered.

Too day's all right." Hester replied, looking about as though she had just become aware of its existence. "Oh, but these people at the boarding house do get on my nerves. I feel as though I'd scream, it doesn't seem as if I could stand it any longer."

"Cheer up," smiled Jerry; "you won't have to, my dear, not if I have anything to say about it."

To Hester the prospect—to this open gateway to the freedom she craved, the girl made no reply. He helped her into the carriage, took his seat on the whip side and spoke to the horse. They trotted off down the road—a road of dreams to the man, road of barriers to the girl.

Now and again the man turned to look at the girl beside him, but there was in her face nothing of the glory that lay deep in his own eyes To Jerry, Hester embodied the ideas he had dreamed of; to him she was the perfection of all [illegible]—he thought of her a day he never missed a chance to be with her, and he showed his devotion so wholeheartedly that the boys and girls in Demopolis looked upon Hester as his particular property, though many of them did not hesitate to wonder what he found in a girl who always wanted to get away.

To these judged by Jerry knew ventured Jerry, "I think this is one of the most wonderful country in the State. It's a country that kept itself to itself. It's the [illegible] way to have escaped taxation."

Hester shook her head. "No, no, Jerry, you say that because you don't know anything about it. You can never get out of it. You're at the far end of [illegible] I get about on [illegible] I'll [illegible]

"What do you want, Hester? There's [illegible] about that. I aren't trying to fill themselves all the time and [illegible]

"Oh, no." Her tone was bitter. "It's enough [illegible] dying of dry rot, most of them are, but that's no reason why I should!—

[illegible] day. He said [illegible] and believed what he said.

A Variance in Views

A wagonload of merrymakers passed them. "Hello [illegible] tired up your nag." Their [illegible] laughter was lost in the distance.

"They think that's funny," said Hester "They're just like the people at Mrs Simmons' subway making stupid jokes and laughing at them."

"Oh, they mean all right," Jerry defended, and they'd do anything for a fellow if he got into trouble."

The picnic grounds lay in a small glen—flanked by a little wood and bounded by a wide brook. It was as though Nature when she fashioned the land looked ahead and provided for Demopolis an amphitheatre of her own modelling

This woodland scene was built in the studios of Cosmopolitan Productions. The large tree was entirely manufactured. The saplings, bushes and flowers are real and were planted in soil spread on a raised platform. The plants were watered frequently to prevent their withering under the strong heat of the studio lamps. "Back Pay" is from the story by Fannie Hurst, scenario by Frances Marion, directed by Frank Borzage.

Fortunately Hester did not hear if she had one might have answered truthfully that such a thing had never entered her head; it was not a case of feeling superior to her surroundings, but a feeling that she needed new environment

She failed to appreciate the loveliness of the late afternoon as she walked down the road to meet her escort, the soft sky, the fragrant little wisps of breeze, the source of the bobolink made no impression on her; unconsciously they translated themselves into the roar of the big city, into the whirl of traffic, into the tumult and excitement of bustle and struggle

Hester walked on, thinking, dreaming Jerry called from afar, waved his hat as he caught sight of her at the turn of the road, yet in Hester he wakened no glad response. A fine figure, with a clean open face, a winning smile, but set blue eyes, he was as trim as the horse he drove and the roadster with its shining wheels.

"Hello, Hester, isn't it a wonderful day?" she greeted her as he pulled in the trotter and jumped [illegible]

"AND now let us forget all about that cabaret stunt. Mr. Hollinghead suggests that. Perhaps he thinks people would think it queer that I sang at a place like that. So after this, I am not going to speak of it. In fact, none of us will."

"No, we won't. It is a mistake to speak of unpleasant things," Mrs. Brown said gently.

Adelaide Brown's knack at imitation stood her in good stead when she became a member of the Hollingshead household. For she had never been in just such an environment before. At school she had been on pleasant terms with many girls, but intimate with none.

Adelaide Brown watched Miss Hollingshead carefully during her first week in her new employer's home. So quick of perception was she, so apt at imitation, that it would have taken a quick observer to detect that she had never before seen such table service, such elegancies of glass, china and silverware, such niceties of detail as she now saw in the rather too elaborately furnished home of Henry Hollingshead.

To the little milliner, the room assigned her, with a bathroom attached, seemed a marvel of luxury. She trod softly on the thick rug as she unpacked her small trunk and hung her few dresses in the big closet. She noted with delight the dainty dressing table with its triple mirror. There had been a triple mirror at Madame O'Brien's, but Adelaide had seldom studied herself in it. She had been afraid of seeming foolishly vain if she did so.

Now, however, she set down her hair and rearranged it, then put on a fresh collar in place of the one she had worn here As she fastened this there was a knock at the door and Patricia entered, and had greeted the new arrival upon her arrival and had told her she was glad to see her. Then she had bade the maid take Miss Brown to her room and order the man to carry up the trunk.

"I will come up for you later," she had said then. "For I must have a talk with you before you see mother."

She had evidently come now for the "talk" for she sank into a chair and motioned Adelaide to sit down.

"I am awfully glad you are here," she said. "But first, have you everything you want?"

"Yes, indeed!" Adelaide said smilingly. "The room is lovely—"

"Yes, it's pleasant enough," the rich girl admitted. "I am going to have a bell arranged from mother's room on the second floor to your room here on the third. She gets dreadfully depressed and needs me. Now you are here, you can go to her at such times. Estelle, her maid, waits on her, of course, but mother gets the blues and wants one of her own kind. Rich people are unreasonable, aren't they?"

"Perhaps they are," Adelaide rejoined She was embarrassed at this sudden conference on the part of her employer's daughter. Patricia may have observed this, for she essayed an explanation.

MILK IN THE DIET

By Brice Belden, M. D.

MILK is considered a perfect food because it contains the protein found in meat, the fat in egg yolk and bacon, the sugar we eat in desserts and otherwise, the salt that we extract from fish, and the water that we draw from the spigot. And then there are the vitamines, in which milk is peculiarly rich.

The proportions of these constituents are as follows: Protein, a little over 4 per cent.; butter fat, a little over 3 per cent.; sugar, a little over 4 per cent.; salt, a little less than 1 per cent., and water, 87 per cent.

A glass of milk is equal in nutritive value to two large eggs, or a large portion of lean meat, or to two moderate sized potatoes, or five tablespoonfuls of cooked cereal, or three tablespoonfuls of boiled rice, or two slices of bread.

In spite of its present high cost, milk is a cheap food. A quart of it goes so far in the upkeep of the body And besides its nourishing properties it is one of the most easily digested of all foods.

The actual fat of quarts of skim milk contain almost as much protein as a pound of beef and yield about the same amount of energy to the body

The number of germs in milk determines its grade. They are an index as to its sanitary quality. It should be free from disease-breeding germs, but under ordinary circumstances it contains some harmless bacteria, in fact some of them are beneficial. But if these germs are found in very large numbers it means that the milk has been imperfectly handled, contaminated with dirt, and not been kept at a sufficiently low temperature.

Mrs. Solomon Says—

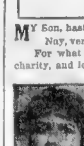
BY HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1921, by The Wheeler Syndicate Wire]

MY Son, hast thou considered the High Cost of Kissing?

Nay, verily!

For what Youth doth not look upon a damsel's kisses as gifts of charity, and love's little "graft"? And what Youth, when he seeketh to kiss a woman, taketh account of the price that he shall pay?



Yet, behold, there is the kiss that leadeth into matrimony, and for which a man payeth in cash and in service and in installments of duty and devotion all his life.

And there is the kiss that leadeth to divorce, and for which he payeth in regret and in alimony all the rest of his days.

And there is the kiss that leadeth to the breach-of-promise suit, and for which he payeth in lawyer's fees and bribes and humiliation.

And there is the kiss that leadeth to flirtation, and for which he payeth in remorse and soul and heartfear.

And there is the kiss of the gold-digger, for which he payeth in orchids and dinners and taxi-fares long after he hath wearied of her kisses.

Yet the Foolish Bachelor hath said in his heart:

"For a kiss is its own reward.

"Lo, to one man a damsel's kiss may be worth a lifetime of punishment. Yet to another man it is worth but the price of a pair of theatre tickets and cab fare.

"To one man a woman's kiss may be worth the price of a solitaire and a wedding ring. And to another it may be worth no more than an evening's dalliance.

WHO, then, shall standardize a kiss, and set a price upon it?

"For kisses are as useless, which may be either sweet or flat—as books, which may be either thrilling or tiresome."

And if this be their philosophy, I charge thee, my Daughter, be thou a PROFITEER!

Selah.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

ALGERNON ARCHIBALD is slim, a chap with soulful eyes, and you would know to glance at him that life was full of sighs. His locks go floating on the breeze, his ties are loose and long and, someway, you can see from these that everything's dead wrong. He dotes on sonnets full of tears, on stanzas of despair; he speaks about the dismal years, each weighted down with cares. Says he: "Some men play cheerful roles with chuckle and grimace. I always find these sunny souls are deadly commonplace." Although it's great to win the girls in Algy's gloomy way, the working hem must cut their curls and hustle all the day. The simple folk, the common crew, must be content, though glad, for just the choicest few have time for being sad!

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Has no equal for prompt results. Takes but a moment to prepare, and saves you about $2.

Pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest. Pine cough syrups are sometimes made of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usual, of which sugar is the base.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup, (to save money use granulated sugar, corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make a full pint—more than you can buy ready-made for three times the money. It is pure, good and it takes right hold.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and Syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago this only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" and you get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.—Advertisement.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if bladder bothers you

Eating meat regularly eventually produces Kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, and stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys seem sluggish, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Advertisement.

WALL ST. GOSSIP

—By MONITOR—

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—So far as price movements in securities for the last week are concerned, nothing of special interest has transpired. The market has shown an improvement in tendencies, and a moderately rising tendency. It is increasingly apparent that the selling of the first week in the new year was largely in the nature of technical readjustment, leaving the broad fundamentals of the situation unimpaired. The reaction was accompanied by considerable short selling, and the covering of these commitments in the last few days has brought about a hardening of values.

NEWS developments have been of a minor nature. There was a slight flurry over the French cabinet crisis, but, with the foreign exchanges showing no disposition to give the episode is exaggerated importance. It was but natural that American security prices should sympathize. As a matter of fact, a cabinet upset in France is to be taken as a matter of course, one of those frequent political shifts that characterize Gallic governmental functions. There is every indication that the Poincare regime if it becomes firmly established will depart little from the policy of the Briand ministry. The incident did not bring about an international crisis in any sense of the word and the net result of the event probably will be a clarification of the atmosphere and a more definite outline of French intentions.

ACTIVITY has been pronounced in some of the stronger placed specialties, motor shares and rails and steels. The automobile show has been responsible for the increased interest in the issues identified with the industry. Production costs and selling prices are coming down, thus reflecting the readjustment that is likely to be typical of industrial developments this year.

IT is impossible to draw any conclu-sions from the report of the United States Steel Corporation on the amount of unfilled orders at the end of December. New business came to the rescue and cancellations were not as large as had been expected. Steel production in the United States is not wholly a domestic affair. This fact is well brought home to us more and more as figures are obtained regarding the activity in other countries.

THESE figures show that while British exports are running in larger volume than those of America, exports from Germany are more than those of the United States and Great Britain combined. This is most striking in view of the fact that Germany's steel capacity is less than it was before the war, while ours has practically doubled. The answer will be found chiefly in production cost, although the case of the greatly depreciated exchange must be taken into consideration.

WALL STREET this week has been much disturbed over the outline of the congressional tariff program. The clamor by various interests to secure special tariff favors is nothing new, but its results may be more serious than in normal times. It is felt that sound business judgment would, for example, that the sugar tariff should be more than one cent per pound, but Louisiana producers want the best sugar interests are asking for a raise from the present rate of two cents to two cents. This would not only work a tremendous hardship on Cuba, but would imperil the American investment of $1,000,000,000 in the Island republic. Added to these disturbing tendencies we find a general disposition on the part of both Houses of Congress to treat as emergencies certain problems that are the normal accompaniments of present day conditions. These panacea cures, if they produce a malady worse than the disease intended, to be cured.

MUCH interest is taken in the out-look for the new cotton crop. Fears are now general that the financial position of the South and the economic dislocation of the South might result in another low crop of cotton. Reports have been current this week, however, that one of the larger fertilizer companies is planning to sell adequate amounts of fertilizers on credit to the farmers, provided they will agree to follow closely the instructions of the company regarding planting and poisoning for insects.

HIGHER MONEY CAUSES FREE SELLING

Rails Led the Morning Advance and Several Specialties Made Large Gains

By W. H. ROSS
Financial Editor.

At the close of the new York market the majority of stocks were showing small gains, but the lowest price level of the day was reached in the last hour. The reaction was due to higher money. The call rate was 6 per cent late in the afternoon, when banks withdrew funds from New York. Doheny oils took a counter-movement in the afternoon, advancing on late trading.

At its highest Mexican Petroleum was up more than three points and Fan American more than two. Motors improved. Sporting finance, advance from one to three points were American Express, Adams Express and Wells Fargo. It is reported that about 15 per cent earned on common stock last year. Among those active in the list, including General Asphalt, International Paper, Nations' Lead and National Enameling. The latter is expected to show for last year around $3,000,000 deficit after dividends. Although call money opened at 3½ per cent, it was soon reported that loans were being called. The rate was 4 per cent, by middday and 5 per cent. in the afternoon. Foreign exchange was somewhat heavy.

ADVANCED AT ONCE.

Prices advanced a little at the opening and the market remained strong during the first hour under the leadership of rails and equipments. Oils were up in most instances, but were not much in a group. Motors took on a little higher level, which was true of tobaccos and coppers. Fine notes of sugar and shipping issues were very quiet. Highs for more than a year were reached by Atchison, which sold at 92, General Electric, Gulf States Steel and Dome Mines. Utah Copper, Car and Foundry, General Motors, Baldwin Locomotive, Baldwin, Canadian Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Southern Pacific, Famous Players, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Lima Locomotive had advanced from one to three points by mid-morning, the last named gaining the most. Mexican Petroleum was one of the weakest issues, receding from a fraction to more than a point. Computing Tabulating, which has been steadily operating, dropped a large fraction. Liberty bonds were a shade easier. The Victory 4¾ issue went to a new high record.

MORE SHORT COVERING.

The covering movement which sent prices up at the end of the week was in force this morning and the advance was helped along by some buying which is reported to have been of speculative character. The present strength of securities is credited to the technical position. As was expected, rates have become easier this month, and a reduction of the discount rate by the New York Federal Reserve Bank is expected soon and possibly this week. Such a cut would broaden the market for commercial paper throughout the East. This ought to be reflected by some improvement in business by Spring. Resources for the expansion of trade are at hand, and the country is still dull it has been quite thoroughly deflated. This condition and change are at hand and than they were six months ago and are moving toward a better era.

GOOD GAINS BY HIGH-PRICED COPPERS

Opening higher, the Boston market retained its strength during the early hours, although prices at noon were a little under the best previous level. Boston Elevated was active and higher at its highest for more than a year. Copper Range also attained the high of figure recorded in 1920. Copper Coppers advanced as a class. Calumet & Hecla, Allouez and Quincy were higher. Utilities were firm, while issues to advance a point or more were Albany Boston Elevated common, Copper Range, Island Creek, Boston & Maine C. New River preferred and Edison Electric Illuminating. American Telephone was a prominent issues and up a fraction. Stocks to sell at dividend were United Drug first preferred, U. S. Rubber first preferred Warren Brothers first and second preferred, Massachusetts Gas and Edison.

The market was quiet and but little changed in the afternoon. Boston & Maine D was up two points, while point gains were shown by Gray & Davis, Waldorf, Walch preferred and Massachusetts Gas. Swift & Co. was down a point. New River preferred lost its morning gain.

HOW TO START UP BUILDING OPERATIONS

Spillane Gives Experience of One Western City in Gathering Needed Data

By RICHARD SPILLANE.

Philadelphia, Jan. 16.—There is a tremendous amount of construction work to be done in the United States. If it could be started general conditions would be improved greatly. But various factors operate to prevent work from embarking in enterprises of this character.

In practically all cases present costs are too high. These costs include the price of money and materials, the wages scale and high rates on transportation of materials.

It is difficult to bring bankers, material men, builders, transportation men and labor together and get all of them to agree to make concessions and work together for the common good. Generally they are inclined to shift responsibility and be suspicious of each other. Not infrequently they lose sight of the main question and descend to personalities. They lose all sense of proportion and do not appreciate the very great rights of those most concerned—the public.

A GET-TOGETHER ATTEMPT.

In a large Middle West city an effort has been made to get all these elements together on a stable basis and a set program fair to all and at the same time make possible the resumption of construction work.

Whose idea it was is not essential to the narrative. The main facts will do. They may be briefly as set forth here, but in general they will be correct. Here they are: In that city there is in the municipal government a man of exceptional ability. He is quiet, self-effacing and determined man. He has the confidence of the people and deserves it. Being an engineer he knows construction work.

Having a person of orderly mind he started out by preparing a table showing the comparative prices of everything entering into the costs of construction work based on the level of 1913, including the maximum in 1920, and the prevailing rate late in 1921. The items in this table included brick, fuel, plumbing, sand, cement, structural steel, reinforcing bars, lumber, paints, varnish, glass, iron pipe, plumbing materials, electric for equipment, cost of living, labor cost for building operations, rates, etc.

This chart showed some remarkable irregularities in deflation.

GETTING BOTTOM RATES.

Then he got together data regarding building projects for which money to high costs. Next he went out and interviewed the persons having charge of those projects about 50 in number. A whole situation with them, the grant worth of restoring confidence, getting the wheels of industry started, etc.

The archbishop of that diocese said there were hospitals, parochial schools, night schools, etc., which were needed and which would cost about $4,000,000, but which he could not afford at prevailing prices.

The civic viewer asked the archbishop for a percentage figure on materials and labor at which he would recommend the placing of contracts. The archbishop gave it.

"Please put it in writing," the visitor said. The archbishop did so.

The Federal Reserve people wanted a new bank building, but were holding off for lower prices. The engineer got a specific statement as to the reduction in material and labor costs that would satisfy them.

"Please put that in writing," he said. It was put in writing.

AMONG MATERIAL MEN.

It was the same with the head of the Jewish hospitals. Such a cut would be a great university, a large textile concern, a big theatrical syndicate, the Scottish Rite, cathedral association, etc.

"Please put that in writing," he asked. It was put in writing.

WHAT LABOR WANTED.

Next he went to the labor leaders. He showed the figures he had collected. He showed also that wages in the building crafts in that city were the highest in the country. He pointed out that material men, cement finishers, electrical workers, steam fitters, pipe overseers and others getting $1.25 an hour, and plasterers and hoisting engineers $1.37 1-2 an hour. He suggested a cut of 20 per cent. The labor leaders politely "would not agree to 7 1-2 per cent., they said, but no more.

The mild-voiced gentleman said he would go beyond them and appeal to labor itself. Thereupon he prepared his case, put all the facts in simple form and asked labor to vote "yes" or "no" on the question of accepting a 20 per cent. reduction.

LAST PICTURE IN BOOK TEST WEDNESDAY

Contestants Have Until Midnight Sunday to Mail or Send in Titles

The Boston American's $5,000 Book Title Picture Test comes to an end on Wednesday of this week with the printing of Test Drawing No. 60.

Contestants will be given until midnight next Sunday night to get their sets of answers into the mail. They may, if they prefer, bring this parcel to the office of the Boston American at No. 10 Summer street, but no parcel will be received there after midnight on Sunday.

The Book Test ends on Wednesday; sets of answers must either be in the mails or in this office at 12 o'clock next Sunday night.

BE SURE OF POSTAGE.

2—Write their names and addresses carefully on the outside of the parcel.

If you intend to bring the parcel to this office in person, or send it here by messenger, the first condition does not apply. If, on the other hand, you are of the great majority who will use the mail, please remember that the Book Test parcel will be classed as "first class mail" and, therefore, must be paid for at letter rates. The Boston American (see the rules) reserves the right to exclude any set of answers which comes to this office marked "Postage Due."

Write your name and address in the upper left hand corner of the outer wrapper. Before any parcel is opened all of them will be numbered and the number, name and address carefully recorded. This preliminary work may take a week or ten days. How much longer it will take will depend upon the number of those who FAIL to write their names and addresses on their parcels.

ALL PARCELS NUMBERED.

No parcel will be opened until all have been numbered and recorded. Then all will be cancelled by perforation. Not until this has been done and the perforating machine taken apart and returned in sections to the office safe, is the List of Correct Titles placed before the Judges and Checkers at Test Headquarters. No answer slips are then considered, of course, unless they bear the mark of the perforator.

Our recent correspondent wants to know if the Book Test Editor has said that the correct titles of five out of the first five pictures consist of one word each.

The answer, of course, is that the Test Editor never has made such a statement. What he did say was that there would be seven lists "like" the Book Test Drawings; that he had seen the first fifty drawings and that they were almost free from text; that a few carried not more than a single word. "Clovis," for example.

Another correspondent "has been told" that the correct Titles of two pictures have been printed in the paper and wants to know what they are.

The Correct Title of Drawing No. 6 is Robinson Crusoe"; of No. 8, "Rip Van Winkle."

HOW TO ADDRESS LISTS.

No contestant, of course, will forward his set of answers before Drawing No. 60 appears. Then, having written your own name in the upper left hand corner of the parcel, address it as follows:

BOOK TEST EDITOR,
BOSTON AMERICAN,
No. 80 Summer Street,
BOSTON (8) Mass.
P. O. BOX, 239.

Do not "guess" what the postage should be. Ask a man at the post office. And be sure the parcel is in the mails not later than 12 o'clock next Sunday night.

Today's List of Titles is the only long list that has been printed in the present Test. It contains the Correct Title of today's picture. A new List of Titles will be printed tomorrow. Today's list is good for today only.

The Boston American desires to make a time record in announcing the result of this Test. If the List of Winners can be made ready in four weeks instead of five, or in three weeks instead of four, the aim will be to do it. You can help by arranging your set of answers that Drawing No. 2 will be on top and No. 60 on the bottom. This will simplify the work of the checkers and hasten the publication of the Good News.

LAST PICTURE WEDNESDAY.

As the Test closes in a perfect flood of questions is at hand:

"What do you think will be the high score?"

"Will there be another Picture Test?"

The Test Editor will not risk a guess in answer to the first query. As this Test is the first of its kind, a method somewhat new. It may or may not be as efficient as the old.

MRS. E. M. SHINNER'S FUNERAL AT WOBURN

Funeral services for Mrs. Ellen M. Shinners, who died Thursday after a somewhat protracted illness, were held from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Alfred L. Gates, on Mill street, Woburn. The Rev. Fred E. Leech, pastor of the Montvalo Congregational Church in Woburn, conducted the services.

Mrs. Shinners was the mother of Arthur Shinners, Boston newspaper man, and is survived, in addition to him and his sister, by a married sister who lives on the South Shore.

The funeral was largely attended. Floral tributes were sent by friends and by Shinners' newspaper associates. Interment was in Glenwood Cemetery, Everett.

THREE SUNDAY CONCERTS FILL AUDITORIUMS

Frieda Hempel, Paulist Choir and People's Symphony Offer Fine Programs

There were three interesting concerts in Boston yesterday and three large audiences demonstrated their appreciation of good music by filling the auditoriums.

In the afternoon Frieda Hempel gave a recital at Symphony Hall. Across the street at the St. James, the People's Symphony Orchestra, Emil Mollenhauer, conductor, gave a concert in the afternoon, and in the evening Father Finn's Paulist choir was heard.

Frieda Hempel is yearly increasing her following, but it is still not as large as she deserves. A beautiful woman, an appealing and magnetic figure on the concert platform, she has no superior as a singer of pure lyrics and vocally as well as artistically she gives great pleasure. She has learned to temper her programs to her audience, something which foreign audiences could not be persuaded to do for a long time. Hempel now sings in English very acceptable and few of our native singers can surpass her in rendering a folk song or a humorous ditty as an encore.

The Paulist Choir is an organization which has also learned to appeal to audiences. Originally Father Finn gave a program of church music, which, beautiful as it was, made a direct appeal only to those who like church music in and out of church. Now he divides the program into two parts. The first part is serious enough. The visit of the choirs from the Sistine Chapel caused Father Finn to devote more attention to the extraordinary works of Palestina and Vittoria, and these are sung very acceptably by the boys. The second part includes popular airs, effective choruses and Irish songs. And in addition to the boy soprano, Mr. John Finnigan, who was formerly soloist at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York, is heard in the songs that the Irish people love.

Increasing Judges' Power

Proposal to Make Them Browbeaters of Juries on Questions of Fact Is Dangerous

Two bills have been filed in the Legislature which have some bearing, the one on the other. One bill provides for the election of judges. The other bill provides that judges may attempt to influence the jury on questions of fact, something they have been carefully forbidden to do these many years.

To make judges the browbeaters of a jury on questions of fact is farther to increase their already overgrown power and to add one straw more to the weight of judicial authority which will soon upset the rather delicate balance of powers which has been the theory of our so-called democratic republic.

The election of judges is one of the answers to this tendency to create a judicial oligarchy. The people of nearly all the States of our Union elect their judges, and give them only a limited term of years. In Massachusetts, we have clung to the old practice of the British Kings, when the judges were just the King's agents, and the courts were just the King's bench.

When we broke from King George, we changed a lot of things, but we let the manner of selecting the judges remain. Our fathers evidently thought that they could trust them, removed though they were from the influence of public opinion by their life tenure. They conceived them simply judges, men sworn to interpret the law. They even thought that life tenure would remove them from the influence of politics and help to keep them out of politics. But they at once, following Marshall, assumed a power which the King's judges did not have in England, never had, do not have now, and never will have. They at once assumed what was never given them, namely, the power to define, limit and regulate the power of the legislature itself, and to be the uncontrolled judges of their own authority.

Since such authority was never before given to judges anywhere in the world, our fathers did not realize what influence it would have in seducing the judges from being mere interpreters and administers of the law to become judges of political expediency and to usurp executive and legislative power, and to restrict the protection of our people given in the right of trial by jury. For the courts constantly deny the right of trial by jury when they exercise their discretion against it on old precedent in the midst of a civilization and social order growing greater and greater and more and more complex, and in which, therefore, the rights of citizens, their substantial rights, have multiplied in number and variety so that the old definitions of the rights that must be protected by a jury and which in the old days were substantially all their rights, now are only a small part of them. It is like putting an iron band around a growing tree; the band must snap or the tree must die.

Our judges have exercised great self-restraint in the use of this extraordinary power. It is not a question of the personality of judges. It is the fact that they are human and as human beings ought not to have such power. Nowhere in the world did judges ever have such power, and they did not and do not have it in England, whence our Massachusetts method of appointing judges for life was inherited.

'Agricultural Bloc' Program

It Doesn't Look Incendiary on Close Study

Copyright, 1922, Star Company

Just what is the program of the "agricultural bloc" at Washington which is sending shivers down the spines of the Old Guard statesmen?

Senator Kenyon, its leader, sets the details forth in Farm Life, and the program, as stated by him, surely doesn't look incendiary. Here it is:

The first bill which we will try to pass is the one to require that agriculture shall be represented on the Federal Reserve Board. The Senators who are backing this measure intend to provide, if possible, that the person appointed to the Federal Reserve Board representing agriculture shall be a genuine farmer, one who is actively and in good faith engaged in farming and not simply an agriculturist.

The second bill which will be pressed by the agricultural bloc this session is the co-operative marketing measure. The purpose of this bill is to encourage co-operation among farmers in the buying and selling of products. Opponents of the measure in the Senate are trying to hedge the measure around with such restrictions as will make it inoperative, or of little value to the farmers.

Third, the agricultural bloc expects to work out in the regular session some new system of rural credits which will give longer and more satisfactory credit to the grain farmer, the livestock man and others in the farming industry for periods ranging from nine months to two years or thereabouts.

The ordinary short-term credits for three months or less are not adequate for the farming industry. The purpose is to have the proposed credits based on commodities, on the products of the farm, or the ranch, or the plantation.

Now, on its face this program looks very much as if its advocates meant to get for our basic producers merely some of the advantages of government long enjoyed by men who trade in what the farmers produce or trade in farmers' supplies.

Really, therefore, we must conclude that the quarrel of the Old Guard is not with the rural program as such, but with the men in the Congress who have dared to combine across party lines to get what their rural constituents demand.

This is naturally awkward for statesmen who have so long served financial and industrial interests in a "special interest bloc" from which the farmers have been usually excluded.

Garland and His Money

If Mr. Garland gives away his inheritance to personal friends he will convict himself of being not an idealist but a mere eccentric. The power of his money, if he wishes to use it to achieve the social objects which he thinks are just, is very great. If he gives his money away to personal friends, he will be exhibiting mere eccentricity and will be doing more for the wrongs of the social system which he disapproves than if he had never inherited the money, for he will be throwing away a chance to be helpful, and giving to others a chance to help perpetuate what he believes to be wrong.

Let him consider what he can do.

2—To help restore to the workingmen their legal rights.

3—To reordain our constitutional liberties taken from us by hysterical Legislatures and cunning judges since the war.

4—To extend the right of trial by jury to all substantial rights which may be put in jeopardy by judicial progress.

7—To limit the power of corrupt propaganda to deceive our people and confound their judgment.

And many other changes which would make life worth living.

CZERNIN BEGS AID FOR AUSTRIA

Former Premier Says His People Base Hopes on Americans in Spite of Bitter Feeling Against ex-President Wilson

The following article was written at the request of Universal Service in Paris by Count Ottokar Czernin, most famous of Central European diplomats of the old school and the man who directed the foreign policy of Austria-Hungary during the great war. It is the first article written for publication by Count Czernin since the war and the peace which destroyed the Austro-Hungarian Empire. His statements constitute an announcement of world-wide importance.

VIENNA, via Paris, Jan. 15—We have the greatest regard for America in Austria. The energy and force of the Americans are trait, valued highly on the borders of the Danube, and the diverse relief organizations sent by the United States to stricken Austria have won our affections and our trust.

In spite of Wilson—for I regret to have to openly state that the former President has not an admirer nor a friend left in all Austria—we look toward America as to a guiding star of destiny.

There are doubts in Austria as to whether Wilson came to grief with his "fourteen points" out of sheer inability, as the well-known Englishman, Keynes, asserts in his book, or whether because he played an unfair game. Today the prevailing opinion throughout Central Europe is that Wilson was the ruin of the Central Powers, and that he is thus guilty of the utter economic shipwreck of the world, a calamity in which America shares.

When Wilson proclaimed his fourteen points I was the first to explain to the statesmen then opponents of America that they offered a suitable basis for negotiations. Wilson replied to my statement then in a speech containing the following sentences:

Wilson's Comment on Czernin

"Count Czernin seems to have a clear understanding of the peace foundations and does not obscure their sense. He sees that an independent Poland composed of all the undeniably Polish inhabitants, the one bordering on the other, is a matter for European settlement and must be granted; further, that Belgium must be evacuated and restored, no matter what sacrifices and concessions it may involve; also that national desires must be satisfied, even in his own empire, in the common interests of Europe and of humanity.

"Though he is silent on certain matters closely connected with the interests of his allies than with Austria-Hungary, that is only natural, because he feels compelled under the circumstances to defer to Germany and to Turkey. Recognizing and agreeing with the important principles in question and the necessity of converting them into action, he naturally feels that Austria-Hungary more easily than Germany can concur with the war aims expressed by the United States. He would probably have gone even further had he not been constrained to consider the Austro-Hungarian alliance and the country's dependence on Germany."

"Count Czernin's answer, referring mainly to my speech on February 3, is couched in very friendly terms. He sees in my statements a sufficiently encouraging approach to the views of his own government to justify his belief that they afford basis for a thorough discussion of the aims by both governments."

Negotiated in Secret

Whereupon, I entered into direct negotiations, at that time secret, with Wilson, in order to put the theory of the fourteen points into practice; that is, to set down, on a basis of the fourteen points, the concessions Austria would make in regard to its new boundaries. In the midst of these negotiations I was obliged to resign from office, and the conversations ended.

(NOTE: This is the first indication ever made that President Wilson was in communication with enemy statesmen as early as the Spring of 1918 regarding a possible armistice.)

Half a year later came the military defeat of Germany, and the Berlin government proposed a peace to Wilson on the basis of his fourteen points. The President accepted and the result was the Peace of Versailles, a derision of the Wilson program as Keynes proves clearly, for the right of self-determination for defeated nations was disregarded; the Germans of northern Bohemia and the Tyrol were annexed to states of alien nationality—the Hungarians of the Banat given to Rumania and the Germans of Silesia given to Poland. Nations were pushed about Europe like chessmen on a board.

The Versailles Treaty considered the fourteen points, on which the Central Empires agreed to make peace, only as points to be considered. And Wilson agreed.

The treaties of Versailles and St. Germain have condemned Central Europe to a hell on earth and have created a universal economic crisis which is only just beginning.

Wilson as an "Emancipator"

Wilson is guilty of another great delinquency. He is the mental originator of the supremacy of social democracy in the Central Europe of today. This is his work, because by his speeches during the war he revolutionized the nations of Central Europe, declaring that the war was in reality not directed against them, but against their potentates.

The whole inner situation of Austria is under the whiphand of the Social Democrats, the emblem of a so-called "emancipation" of the working classes—an "emancipation" which has resulted in the death of thousands from starvation and cold.

The peace which the Social Democrats dictated to the bourgeoisie in the form of wage demands has turned the employer into the impresario of the employed. The relations of the celebrated poera singer and his impresario, which, although leaving the star dependent on his contract with the latter, let him draw upon multiplied receipts, are duplicated in the present labor situation. The employer now gets about 10 per cent, the government 10 per cent, while the remaining 80 per cent, is divided among the employed.

The entire Austrian calamity, especially the deficit in State finances, is chiefly due to this one-sided class policy. According to the budget project about eighty-three billion crowns will be paid by the government for supplementary rations, a lessening of which would bring revolt. All other classes must bow to the new dictatorship of the employed. Economy and retrenchments are only to be found among the middle classes.

Slight Ray of Hope

A slight ray of hope seems to come from the financial project of the Social Democrats, as in the presentation of positive propositions there lies at least a renunciation of the principles of Communism. Especially the reduction of the government's supplementary payments for the purpose of lessening food costs may not be eliminated from the budget at the cost of the employes but must be paid for by the employers, who are already poorer than the men whose wages they pay. But the representatives of Austrian industry have already made the public-spirited concession that they will accept this burden so that State expenses may be lessened.

In these beginnings of true good-will form an agreeable contrast to the perturbations of the bourgeoisie immediately following the revolution, we can perceive a first step toward recovery. This is highly to the credit of the Austrians, who hitherto have not been too inclined to courageously take matters into their own hands and help themselves.

Nevertheless, even if the financial plan, as the precursor of a whole system of economic measures and taxation, is rigorously carried out, there is no way of foregoing foreign credits, as the deficit cannot be eliminated in spite of the utmost pressure.

IS THERE CO-OPERATIVE SAVING IN YOUR HOUSE?

Thousands of couples are doing some close figuring at the present. They are figuring on the amount earned and trying to calculate how to make the savings bigger.

Sometimes the husbands are extravagant and the wives are saving and there are cases where the reverse is true.

Often those who save become discouraged by the expenditures of the other and feel there is no use in scrimping along for the other to have more to spend.

This frequently results in quarrels, and the saving one turns spendthrift and before long the domestic condition is in a bad way.

The family bank account cannot grow as it should unless each member of the family is glad and willing to save.

The co-operative spirit is as necessary at home in financial matters as it is in the business world.

The man who works hard, denies himself new things in order to save, is going to balk sometimes if his wife spends lavishly, and the same holds good if the positions are reversed.

BARRIERS OF RACE AND CREED MAR YOUR JOY

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

PERHAPS it sounds like somewhat of an exaggeration to say that human beings have neither race nor creed.

The statement is not the flowering of exuberant enthusiasm over human nature as it is; nor is it a super-sentimental prophecy of what human nature soon, or some day, is to be.

Merely it means that when You are really human, this becomes the deepest and the highest fact about you; and your so-called racial origin and your professed religion can no longer prevent your conscious joy in human brotherhood.

When beings are Human they are beyond the need of profession; THEY ARE! Their race then is the Human Race, their creed the common aspiration of man Godward and Goodward.

Are You this kind of Human Beings? That is the type for which spiritual democracy makes!

You will find it literally the happiest day of your life—the day on which you can honestly celebrate your reunion with the rest of the race!

Thenceforth, whatever your other relations, beliefs and loyalties, you are a member—in good and happy standing—of the Ancient, United and Improving Order of Humanity.

Your initiation fee is payable in the happiness of your discovery of human unity. Your daily membership dues are to be paid in the continuous gift of the coin of your goodwill.

But goodwill is a spiritual quality which, like every other ideal, needs embodiment and practical expression in order to become personally and socially significant.

If you were going to be satisfied with the mere profession of good will, you may as well give up your membership card in the Order of Humanity.

Be Human

But, if you knew what you were losing, you would set to work to win your reinstatement. And, fortunately, you can secure your former favored status through your own effort with yourself and through subsequent self-election.

Perhaps you do not feel sure that you wish to have your humanness the deepest and the highest fact about you. Of course, that is for you to judge and choose.

There seem to be some folks—to the benighted pre-prohibition days—who actually preferred drunkenness to sobriety; who delighted to let an enemy into their mouths to steal away their brains; who were satisfied to be befuddled fools.

There is no accounting for tastes, whether in things spirituous or in matters spiritual.

There are the best judge of what You want; though not necessarily of what is most desirable for you or what would give you the greatest gain in genuine and lasting satisfactions.

As for this idea of being first, last and everlastingly, fortunately and actively HUMAN. If the greatest seers and saints of all the ages and the democratic teachers of our time had not discovered, through thought and experience, that one big investment brings the fullest life and the keenest joy, they would not have taught and lived as they did.

Gain and No Loss

Let us say—since we have specified race and creed—that you are a Caucasian and a Presbyterian. You are not less white because you recognize the humanness, and you respect the yellow skin, of the Mongolian; and likewise the black cuticle of the Negro.

Simply, you become easily able to extend your goodwill to all your fellowmen, instead of being restricted in your sympathies by a narrowing loyalty to one fashion in color—or colorlessness.

You are a Presbyterian with growing pains. Very well—congratulations! You are in the way of becoming Human. You begin to see excellence in your fellow-Protestants. Then you succeed in discovering that Catholics are your fellow-Christians.

And, finally, you discern that Jews and Mohammedans and Buddhists and "Pagans," if you will, are not un-believers, but other-believers.

You need not be less Presbyterian, because you now recognize everybody as a member of the Universal Religion, of the cosmic company of aspirants to God and to Good!

If, friendly reader, you happen to cherish some other race-color or some other kind of creed, the process of giving them their place in a scale of human values is precisely the same.

You need never be less loyal to your particular kind, because you have learned to love mankind more.

For now you know that all your fellows are in the "race," and you are an active member of the religion whose embodied creed is the good deed.

DIVISIONS OF TIME IN THE DAY

By Garrett P. Serviss

"A discussion about 'afternoon' and 'night' arose from the reading of one of your articles. Now, technically and scientifically speaking, are forenoon and afternoon identical with A. M. and P. M.? One contends that forenoon and afternoon constitute the entire day, 'daytime' and 'nighttime' being subsidiary words. The other maintains that a day consists of morning, afternoon, evening and night as the four principal subdivisions. Does afternoon constitute the last twelve hours of the day, as does P. M., or is it only a part of P. M. together with evening and night?—E. J. P., Elgin, Ill.

ASTRONOMICALLY a day consists of twenty-four continuous hours, without regard to whether they are hours of sunlight or darkness, the measure of the day being the length of time required for the earth to make one turn on its axis. In reckoning time by hours, or other subdivisions of the day, consisting of a limited number recurring again and again in the same circular order, it is necessary to choose a point of beginning on the circle, and it has been found convenient to select for that purpose the instant when the centre of the sun in its daily apparent course around the earth crosses the meridian, or the "noonline."

Directly opposite to the noonline is the midnight-line. The hours from midnight round to noon are the "A. M." (ante meridian) hours, and those from noon to midnight the "P. M." (post meridian) hours. Thus the whole day, light and dark together, is divided into two equal parts.

For scientific purposes the astronomer pays little attention to this division, as he counts the hours in continuous series of twenty-four, from O round to O again, and his zero point, or point of beginning is noon.

For Civil Life

For the purpose of civil life this is not convenient (especially the starting at noon), and ordinary clocks and watches divide the day into two twelve-hour parts, the starting point for the whole day, however, being midnight. Thus the hour-hand is twice in every revolution at the zero point, viz., at midnight and again at noon. This is the origin of the A. M. and P. M. arrangement, which also entirely disregards the difference between daylight and darkness.

But in practical affairs every day life, and from the popular point of view, that difference cannot be thus treated as if it did not exist, and the necessity of recognizing it, and taking account of it, has led to other, unscientific but extremely useful and agreeable, subdivisions of the twenty-four-hour period called a day. Some of the terms used for these subdivisions accord substantially with the lines already mentioned, and some do not. Thus "afternoon" and "forenoon" are popular terms, usually restricted to the respective intervals of time between noon and sunset and sunrise and noon. But these do not accord with the A. M. and the A. M. intervals since the latter begin and end not with sunrise and sunset, but with midnight and noon.

Thus we have twelve A. M. and twelve P. M. hours, but only, on the average, six forenoon and six afternoon hours. The two systems meet only at the noon line, where forenoon changes to afternoon and where A. M. becomes P. M. In the general acceptance of the terms, forenoon and afternoon are restricted to the daylight hours and do not run through the hours of darkness.

"Morning" is nearly synonymous with forenoon, but many persons think of it as being restricted to the early hours, and as soon approaches they speak of the time as being forenoon rather than morning.

Early Risers

Thus if a person awakes and looks at his watch after midnight he says: "It is 1 o'clock or 2 o'clock, in the morning." Habitual early risers, getting up before daylight, speak of the time as morning, but they do not call it forenoon until after the sun has risen. All this, you perceive, is a matter of custom and usage, which may vary in different places and with different persons.

"Evening" is, by common usage, restricted to the early hours of the night, generally beginning after sunset, what we might call the social hour, and as midnight approaches most well regulated persons consider that the evening is past and night has come.

The inconsistencies of these popular divisions of time are indicated by such well known facts as the following: If, after going to bed in the evening you do not awake until sunrise, you say "I have slept the whole night through." But if you chance to be aroused an hour or so after midnight you say: "I was awakened early this morning." So, it depends upon circumstances whether you call certain parts of the day "night" or "morning."
